Reagan's blueprint for rebuilding GOP

No need to create third party, he tells conservatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan called Saturday night for a "New Republican Party," rebuilt on conservative principles and shed of its country club image.

"My friends," Reagan told the Conservative Political Action Conference, "the time has come to start acting to bring about the great conservative majority party we know is waiting to be created."

Although some of the ideas in his speech at a "Salute to Ronald and Nancy Reagan" dinner had been floated earlier, it was the first comprehensive presentation of his blueprint for the conservative future and his strongest personal assertion of leadership since his presidential campaign died just short of nomination last August.

Reagan said the answer for conservatives is not to start a third party but to seize and restructure the GOP.

"I believe the political success of the principles we believe in can best be achieved in the Republican party," Reagan said. "I believe the Republican party can and should provide the political mechanism through which the goals of the majority of Americans can be achieved.

"For one thing," he said in his text, "the biggest single grouping of conservatives is to be found in that party. It makes more sense to build on that grouping than to break it up and start over.

"Rather than start a third party, we can have a new first party made up of people who share our principles."

Reagan has suggested that the Republicans look for a new name, but he said in the meantime he would call the dreamed of conservative majority "The New Republican Party."

"The New Republican Party I envision will not, and cannot, be one limited to the country club-big business image that it is burdened with today," the former California governor said.

"The New Republican Party I am speaking about is going to have room for the man and woman in the factories, for the farmer, for the cop on the beat and the millions of Americans who may never have thought of joining our party before but whose interests coincide with those represented by principled Republicans," he said.

Reagan also said the foundation of the new version of the party should be the conservative platform which his followers hammered through the 1976 Republican convention.

Reagan pictured a political majority built on a grassroots, populist conservatism, resting on economic rugged individualism, an aversion to social engineering and a demand for military strength.

To help him Reagan has about $1 million left over from his "Citizens for Reagan" presidential campaign fund.

That money has been placed in a new organization with the same CFR initials, "Citizens for the Republic," with Ronald Reagan as chairman and Lyn Nofziger, Reagan's longtime poltical adviser, as salaried executive officer.

The new CFR will use the 1976 campaign surplus to help friendly candidates, and it will also be a vehicle to raise more funds, said Nofziger.

"We want to go ahead and have Ronald Reagan continue to have an impact on the direction the party takes and the direction the country takes," Nofziger said in a recent interview. "But we think that anybody who's talking presidential now is out of his mind."

TOGETHER AGAIN

After five years of trying, Cathy Theimer, 26, left, a doctoral student of Russian literature at Columbia University, was reunited Saturday with her fiance, Vyacheslav L. Nepomneshchy, at New York's Kennedy Airport. The Russian was given permission by his government recently to come to the U.S. to marry Miss Theimer. They met seven years ago when she was in the Soviet Union studying. She left two years later and returned to the U.S. without her fiance.

Tragedy may add impetus to replace system

Motorman blamed for crash of Chicago 'L'

CHICAGO (AP) — City transit officials blamed a 34-year-old motorman Saturday for a rush-hour elevated train collision that killed 11 persons and injured 200.

James McDonough, chairman of the Chicago Transit Authority, said the Loop elevated train system remains safe for commuters despite the collision that sent cars and passengers plummeting onto a downtown street. Some riders were buried under tons of twisted metal.

As federal and local investigations opened an investigation into the latest tragedy on the accident-plagued Loop "L," which was constructed in the 1890s, McDonough said at a news conference that safety equipment installed after the last serious crash remains in proper working order.

Although he blamed motorman Stephen Martin, who remained in serious condition in a hospital, McDonough refused to say precisely what the driver of the train had done wrong. He said investigators questioned Martin and the answers convinced him the problem was "man failure."

Federal investigators later said that the motorman may have violated CTA rules by failing to notify the CTA controller when he proceeded despite a flashing red light in his cab.

When there is a steady red light, the motorman is required to come to a complete stop; but a flashing red light allows the motorman to move ahead at a speed under 15 miles per hour after contacting the controller, officials said.

Martin apparently stopped for the steady warning light, but then started moving on the flashing signal without notifying the controller, federal investigators said.

Kay Bailey, who is heading the federal probe, said she was told by CTA authorities that the train was traveling about 10 m.p.h. when the collision occurred.

The federal inspection team had not yet determined whether the warning light in Martin's cab was functioning properly or whether his visibility was hindered at the time of the accident.

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told reporters the wreck should hasten the replacement of the "L," which has been troubled by a series of major accidents over the years.

Percy said the tragedy should add impetus for action on a 5-year-old plan to tear down the elevated tracks that circle the downtown district and put in a subway system.

Chicago's elevated trains and subways are the main mode of transportation to work for hundreds of thousands of workers at offices and shops in the downtown district.

In 1972, state officials announced that the federal government had awarded $5.8 million to the city to study a Loop subway to replace the "L." Chicago recently got another grant of $3.5 million for engineering and environmental studies for the project.

Although officials said they hoped to get the project rolling before this year, the plan supported by both the late Mayor Richard Daley and acting Mayor Michael Bilandic, tentatively known as the Franklin Street subway, has been stalled.

McDonough said he was "confident that the CTA system is safe ... and even though the investigation is not complete and is very preliminary" the cause was "man failure."

Preliminary testing of Martin for drugs or alcohol proved negative, McDonough said.

Asked about the possibility of criminal charges being filed in connection with the crash, CTA spokesman Tom Buck replied: "It's not under consideration at all."

U.S. orders Russ newsman to leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department announced Saturday that it has ordered a Russian journalist to leave the United States. The move was made in response to the Soviet expulsion of an Associated Press correspondent in Moscow.

State Department spokesman Frederick Z. Brown said the department "notified the Soviet Embassy today that Vladimir I. Alekseyev, a Washington correspondent of Tass, must leave the country within a week."

George Krimsky of The AP was given a week to leave the U.S.S.R. after being accused of espionage activities and of violating Soviet currency regulations.

Krimsky was the first journalist to be expelled from the Soviet Union since 1970. The AP and Krimsky rejected the charges and pointed out that Krimsky has reported extensively on Soviet dissidents.

"We have specified that our expulsion of Alekseyev is in response to the Krimsky expulsion. We regret this course of events, which is a step backward from the objective of improving working conditions for journalists contained in the Helsinki final act, and from the more fundamental interests of promoting a freer flow of information," Brown said.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Saturday that President Carter had approved the State Department order.

Earlier Saturday, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., referring to Krimsky's expulsion, said: "We ought to tell one of their people right away to start packing his bags. I believe in retaliation to this sort of thing."

Gunfire erupts in W.E.; 2 hurt

Two arguments escalated into gunfire Saturday night in the West End leaving one man wounded and another injured.

The first incident took place on Highland Street east of Haven Avenue in Alta Loma where Roger D. Steifel, 24, 1111 E. Seventh St., Pomona, was shot in the neck following an argument over a girl.

Police said that Steifel and several friends were in the area when the argument broke out. Steifel was shot by another man with a .22 caliber Ruger pistol. Friends disarmed his assailant who was left on foot in the Alta Loma area while Steifel was taken to the hospital.

He was reported in stable condition at Pomona Valley Community Hospital before being taken to County-USC Medical Center in Los Angeles for emergency surgery.

The parking lot of the K-Mart store on Central Avenue in Montclair was the scene of the second shooting when an argument following a traffic accident erupted into gunfire.

Injured was David Lopez, 19, a U.S. Marine who was hurt by pieces of broken glass which struck him in the head. The party with whom Lopez was arguing, police said, fired one round from a single-barreled shotgun into the windshield of the Lopez car around 8:30 p.m. following the accident and argument.

Lopez was treated for head wounds and x-rayed for skull fractures at Montclair Doctors Hospital

Police are looking for a gold 1970 Plymouth Capri.

Admiral may be CIA nominee

NEW YORK (AP) — Adm. Stansfield Turner, commander of NATO's forces in southern Europe, is President Carter's leading candidate for nomination as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Time magazine said Saturday.

Turner, 53, was a classmate of Carter's at the U.S. Naval Academy.

White House sources said that three or four names were being considered but Turner was "the serious frontrunner," Time said.

The magazine said that Carter appears to be making a careful, middle-of-the road choice after the withdrawal of Theodore Sorensen as a candidate.

Wants expanded economies to help rest of world

Carter pressuring Germany and Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is stepping up pressure on Japan and Germany to follow the U.S. lead in expanding their domestic economies to help the rest of the world.

Two top Carter administration economic officials made that clear to newsmen last week after their return with Vice President Walter F. Mondale from his globe-circling visit to major U.S. allies.

The administration's pressure is directed chiefly at Japan and Germany for two reasons:

—Their economies, along with that of the United States, are the only ones large enough and sufficiently healthy to be able to help the rest of the world.

—The United States clearly feels both have been dragging their feet up to now. This attitude isn't new with the Carter administration. Many top officials of the Ford administration felt the same way.

What prompts the renewed pressure from the Carter administration is worry over the state of the world economy, which, like the U.S. economy, is in the aftermath of the worst recession since the 1930s.

Richard Cooper, undersecretary of state for economic affairs, said that while the world economy has started to recover, "it is a slow recovery and a fragile one. There is cause for concern, if not anxiety."

Not only the world's poor nations, but also some of the normally wealthy ones, especially Great Britain and Italy, have had to borrow heavily to get through the problems caused in large part by the fourfold increase in world oil prices.

Cooper said the heavy borrowing cannot continue unchecked, and that steps must be taken to ease the burden on poor nations and on struggling industrial nations to keep their economies from crumbling further.

The unstated assumption for this concern is that if one major economy should go, then others could follow suit. The same is true for poor nations and their debts. If one is unable to pay back what it has borrowed from major private banks, then banks might refuse loans to others, setting off a chain reaction of bankruptcies.

Thus, it is in everybody's interests to find solutions, Cooper said.

According to Cooper and C. Fred Bergsten, an assistant Treasury secretary for economic affairs, one way these countries can be helped is for the big three economies — Japan, Germany and the United States — to stimulate their domestic economies so that those countries would purchase more imports from the struggling nations.

This means the big three economies would produce foreign trade deficits with other countries for a time. It also means those other countries would not be further pressed into indebtedness.

The United States had a substantial trade deficit of more than $5 billion in 1976, but Japan and Germany both had trade surpluses which put added pressure on their trading partners.

Cooper and Bergsten were with Mondale on his world trip and talked with officials in Germany and Japan to emphasize that the United States wished Germany and Japan also to register trade deficits.

Cooper and Bergsten reason that the trade deficits will occur almost automatically if Japan and Germany stimulate their economies from within. This would increase imports from other nations, they say.

Carter has proposed a $31 billion program to stimulate the U.S. economy and the nation plans to run another deficit in its trade accounts this year.

"If we act together, we can get the world economy moving without inflation," said Cooper.

They said that officials in both Germany and Japan were in agreement with the basic arguments that Mondale and other U.S. officials made.

But Cooper said that with respect to Germany, "it remains to be seen to what extent the shared views will be transferred into German domestic policy."

Bergsten said the Japanese told him they would run a trade deficit this year, but he noted that they ended up with a surplus in 1976, even though they had projected a deficit.

"I think we put them on notice that we would be watching closely," he said.

Looks like no stopping Congress' big pay hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — An elite group of Washington-area families can look forward to March 1 when they'll apparently get a healthy boost in income.

They include the Mondales, the Burgers, the O'Neills and Byrds, the Vances and Browns and the families of other high government officials.

All told, members of Congress, Supreme Court justices, Cabinet members and other top executive department officials and a smattering of other highlevel bureaucrats such as the librarian of Congress will get the pay increases unless Congress rejects the hikes.

Such a rejection appears unlikely.

The planned pay hikes would raise salaries of Senate and House members to $57,500 a year from the current $44,600. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger would have their salaries increased to $75,000 from $65,500.

All Cabinet members, such as Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown would get a $3,000 raise to $66,000, Associate Supreme Court justices would go to $72,000 from $63,000.

Lower federal court judges would get a raise to $54,500 from $42,500 and some 20,000 top civil servants whose salaries have been frozen at $39,000 for several years would receive hikes of up to $7,900.

Out of all the people who will benefit from the pay raise, one group had a chance to say, "No, thanks." That was Congress which has until Feb. 19, to reject the recommendation submitted by former President Gerald R. Ford.

Unless the House or Senate votes to reject by that date, the pay increases automatically go into effect.

The Senate voted 56 to 42 last week to table a motion to reject the pay raise. And the House apparently isn't going to vote at all. That was assured when the leadership sent the matter to the Post Office and Civil Service Committee which plans three days of hearings this week.

Then, before the committee can do anything else, the House will break for its annual Lincoln Day recess.

When the House returns on the 16th, the committee will meet and decide if it wants to recommend that the House reject the pay raise, an action not considered very likely.

But if the committee did recommend rejection, there still wouldn't be enough time to bring the matter to a vote on the House floor before the Feb. 19 deadline expired.

Under the House rules, matters reported to the full House for a vote must lay over for three days after the report has been printed in order to give members ample time to study the measure.

So, by its silence, the House indirectly will give final approval to the controversial salary measure.

There was anything but silence in the Senate when the matter came up.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., a longtime foe of congressional pay raises, joined the other side on this one.

Byrd noted that members of Congress had received one 5 per cent cost of living pay increase since 1969, a period in which the actual cost of living has increased 40 per cent.

"I realize that it is difficult for each of us here to vote for a pay increase," Byrd told the Senate '. . .But unless we face up to situation, this is a crisis in government that will continue to grow.

"It will not go away and, more and more, only the wealthy will be able to make the financial sacrifice necessary to render government service in the nation's capital."

Byrd was joined in his support of the pay raise by Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn. They also supported a move to appoint a special committee to draft a tougher code of ethics for Congress.

A-Victoria flu seen as danger to elderly

MIAMI (AP) — The strain of A-Victoria flu that first appeared at a Miami nursing home and apparently killed two elderly patients does not have severe symptoms, but it can be very dangerous to the old and infirm, officials said Saturday.

Fifty-seven patients at the Treasure Isle Convalescent Home were affected by the nation's first outbreak this season of the A-Victoria flu, which generally is more severe than Hong Kong-B flu. Hong Kong-B has been reported in about 30 states so far this season.

Last year, more than 11,000 deaths nationwide were blamed on A-Victoria.

Dr. Richard Morgan, director of the Dade County Health Department, said one of the nursing home residents, a woman in her 80s who was not identified, died Friday after being transferred to a hospital. A second woman, 88 years old, died within the past week, he said.

Morgan said both deaths apparently were caused by A-Victoria influenza. Another death, that of a 98-year-old patient, might have been connected with the flu, Morgan said.

He said laboratory tests were being considered in an effort to determine a definite cause of death of all three patients.

Nursing home officials refused comment.

The national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta confirmed on Friday that the A-Victoria flu strain had been found in Miami. The outbreak began Jan. 26.

"People who are old often have underlying illnesses that make them very susceptible to this type of disease," Morgan said. "Even a mild cold can be devastating."

He said the general symptoms of the disease at the nursing home were a 101-to 102-degree fever, cough, nasal discharge, loss of appetite, sore throat and muscle aches.

Nine-hour battle against fire, explosion as barge hits bridge

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Firemen fought for nine hours to extinguish a flaming spill of volatile fuel they called "liquid dynamite" Saturday after a barge exploded on the Mobile River.

The barge, one of four carrying an estimated 4 million gallons of highly flammable naphtha, crashed into the Cochrane Bridge shortly before 5:30 a.m., sending a shudder across this port city.

No injuries were reported, but the blast turned into a raging fire five miles north of downtown Mobile.

For hours, flames from the spill threatened to spread to the other three barges still linked to the burning hulk, as well as to fuel storage tanks on the river banks.

Winds and currents kept the fire from spreading to the other three barges. Officials had said it was impossible to separate the other three barges from the blazing wreckage.

The fire finally was extinguished late Saturday afternoon. The U.S. Coast Guard said fire control teams would remain near the barge overnight.

The extent of damage to the bridge was not immediately known. It had been raised to allow the tugboat pushing the barges to pass beneath. Paint was blackened, but structural damage, if any, could not be assessed immediately.

A spokesman for the U.S. Coast Guard, which sent boats to the scene, said it was too early to assess environmental damage, if any.

The spokesman estimated the lead barge contained up to 30,000 barrels of naphtha, an oil distillate.

Fire officials said the crew of the tugboat W.F. Frederman Jr., which had been pushing the barges, moved to safety after the explosion and that the bridge operator was unharmed.

"I was knocked to my knees," said Charles Greenwood, an oil company guard who was standing on a dock near the bridge when flames shot 100 feet into the sky.

Living amid all-but-forgotten memories

ORVAL FAUBUS

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer

HUNTSVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Like any other mountain man in these parts, he had been doing his chores. He knocked the snow from his ax, rested it against the wall of the house and ambled inside.

The house is no ordinary house. It rambles for 214 feet along the side of a mountain overlooking this Ozarks village. It is a monument to the man who built it, a shrine to his political career, a place where people once paid $1.25 a head to see it.

But the mansion is seldom visited now, and Orval Faubus, former governor of Arkansas, onetime symbol of resistance to school desegregation, lives there in relative isolation with his second wife, Elizabeth, and her two children he has adopted.

Twenty years ago, Faubus ignited the Little Rock school crisis by ordering the Arkansas National Guard to bar nine black children from Central High School. A year later, he was selected to the Gallup Poll's list of the "Ten men in the world most admired by Americans."

Now, at 67, he is a somewhat forgotten man, writing memoirs of his glory days as a political power, a world figure; his frustrations of attempted comebacks that failed; his sorrows of his son, Farrell, a drug addict who committed suicide last June.

"The times have changed," he says. "Today, nobody as ugly as Abraham Lincoln can win. In my day, people cared about issues. Candidates today are a new breed — the New South — superficial and flashy. I don't know whether it's the New South, or if it's just gone to worms."

For Faubus, times have changed. Few come to Governor's Hill to view memorabilia of better days. Few see the dozen Arkansas license plates hanging in the foyer, each bearing the number 1, one for each of his 12 years as governor. Few see the framed photographs of Faubus with the great and near-great, or the framed newspaper clippings and cartoons, scores of them, from the days when he made headlines around the world.

He discourages visitors. Red and black "Keep Out" signs dot the driveway that winds to Faubus' front door. Townsfolk say when he walks through the streets of Huntsville, he usually is too distracted to wave.

In February, 1969, two years after they left the Governor's Mansion in Little Rock and 37 years after they were married, Alta Faubus gave Orval Faubus a much-publicized divorce. Three weeks later, there was a new Mrs. Faubus, a divorcee with two children, a woman 29 years younger than her husband.

The second marriage, unpopular with Faubus' family, friends and political admirers, "was a factor, a major factor" in his ensuing political losses, Faubus said.

When Faubus announced he was coming out of retirement to run for governor in 1970, first wife Alta told newsmen: "Oh, it's the same old story. Just a lot of promises. He promised to love, honor and obey me, and he broke all those promises."

Faubus lost the election to Dale Bumpers, a little-known Charleston lawyer who now is the junior U.S. Senator from Arkansas.

In 1974, Faubus tried again and failed. His gubernatorial campaign was plagued with problems, political and personal. The press, as he said, crucified him, and Farrell, then 35, was released from a state hospital against Faubus' wishes.

With the election over, Faubus had Farrell committed to a federal drug addicition center near Phoenix, Ariz.

After Farrell's funeral last June, his father sent friends a letter which read: "I thought you should know that Farrell's life in his later years was as tragic as his death. His last years were likewise a nightmare to the close members of his family."

Farrell's parents disagree over how the drug habit began. His mother said he became addicted by using diet pills in his constant battle to keep his weight below 300 pounds. His father said he got hooked while experimenting while a student at the University of Arkansas.

Not long before Farrell died, he said he expected to live in his father's shadow "the rest of my life. People just don't seem to forget."

But both he and the former governor were wrong, according to George Douthit, a former reporter for the Arkansas Democrat and a Faubus favorite. "Faubus thought everyone would treat him like a king after he left," Douthit said. "That's why he built that mansion, so he'd have a place to receive them. But nobody goes to see him now. They've already forgotten."

Special projects cutback

First steps by Pomona district

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Pomona school board has taken the first steps toward cutting back special projects in the district with the elimination of three from its list of about 29.

No major program was eliminated in voting Tuesday evening, but several were adopted by 3-2 votes.

The votes only granted approval to submit applications for continuing the programs and did not insure that funding would be available.

Eliminated were three programs which were not adopted for lack of a second when the vote was called. Included were the ethnic heritage program of the Emergency School Aid Act (ESAA) which officials saw as redundant to other programs already in the district, the State Environmental Education program and the New Careers in Education program.

The Headstart program was adopted unanimously on a motion by trustee Eugene Whitlock who called for a high level administrator to overlook the program to "make sure education is going on there and just not babysitting."

Programs adopted by a 3-2 vote included the ESAA Pilot project, the bilingual vocational educational program, the school and community resources involvement program (SCRIP), and the Elementary and Secondary Education Act for neglected and delinquent students.

Trustees Keh Pine and Whitlock dissented in all those votes.

The board also approved the ESAA bilingual program by a 4-1 vote with Whitlock dissenting. The ESAA bilingual program and the bilingual vocational education program were approved despite administrative recommendations that both programs could be dropped with little impact on the district's instructional capability.

Whitlock said, "Somewhere down the line we won't be able to fund these programs anymore and we are going to have to make cuts or find a way to take these programs into the district."

Trustee C. Allen Braswell said, "As long as these programs will offer some benefit to the district, we should get them."

Whitlock said, "I would like to see a state or federally funded program come along for the normal kid who wants to get an education."

Right man . . . wrong district

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

Charter Oak school board candidate Frank Correnti almost missed the boat for this year's March 8 school board elections.

Correnti, who lives in San Dimas, had originally announced his candidacy for election to the Bonita Unified School District. Only one problem . . . he doesn't live there.

Through the apparent oversight of someone, Correnti, a retired investigator, was not told until recently that he was not eligible to run for office in the Bonita district.

He was told instead, that he was a resident of the Charter Oak Unified school district and would have to run for a seat on their board if he was to run at all.

Why all the mess?

Correnti says that it is due to unusual boundaries between the Bonita and Charter Oak districts. Every school located in San Dimas is in the Bonita district, but not every resident of San Dimas goes to Bonita schools.

It seems Correnti lives very close to the boundary line separating the two, and was unaware that he did indeed live on the Charter Oak side.

Apparently, the Los Angeles County Registrar-Recorder's Office was unaware, too, for until recently they had Correnti listed as a candidate for the Bonita school board.

As of now he's not.

Correnti, on learning of the error, promptly withdrew form the Bonita race, where he faced four challengers for two seats, and threw his hat into the race in Charter Oak, where unfortunately the competition is a little more crowded.

Including Correnti, there are now 10 candidates in the Charter Oak race. "The registrar's office just plain made a mistake," said Correnti. "I live less than one block from the Bonita boundaries, and they just assumed I was in the Bonita district. It's all straightened out now and I'm looking forward to the Charter Oak election.

Older buildings still unsafe

Earthquake danger looms over Southland residents

By BILL GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Six years after a major earthquake in the northern suburbs killed 58 persons, Los Angeles still has thousands of older buildings likely to tumble if a big quake hits near the heart of town.

The Feb. 9, 1971, San Fernando quake was a near miss. A few miles to south it could have been devastating. Local government heeded the warning and formed an earthquake commission that recommended ways to avoid tragedy.

The No. 1 recommendation was to make the older buildings earthquake safe or destroy them by 1980.

Any progress?

"No progress so far, it's a very hazardous situation," said George Housner, a California Institute of Technology scientist and building safety expert who was on the earthquake commission. "If a big quake were to hit Los Angeles, it would be a disaster, no question about it."

Progress has also been slow on the No. 2 recommendation — that dams be examined and made safe. And homeowners apparently have ignored the recommendation that they buy earthquake insurance.

Preparation is critical because quake experts say a big tremor is overdue along the San Andreas fault in Southern California.

The failure of Los Angeles to do anything about the problem of old, unreinforced buildings is highlighted by the fact that Long Beach, 20 miles south, has made great progress in getting rid of such structures.

Ed O'Connor, the man most responsible for Long Beach's success, says Los Angeles officials have ducked the problem for 20 years.

Nobody knows how many old, unreinforced buildings there are in Los Angeles, but the most common estimate is about 11,000 to 14,000. Officials figure about 150,000 people either live or work in the buildings.

After five years of haggling, the City Council recently considered an ordinance that would have required building owners to make such structures safe or destroy them within 10 years. Owners would also have had to post a notice that the building did not meet earthquake safety standards.

On Jan. 24, the council tabled the ordinance and ordered more study.

It will now be at least six months and maybe two years before another ordinance is considered, supporters of the ordinance say.

The owners of the old buildings say their structures have lasted 40 or 50 years without collapsing. They point to economic and social problems — the great expense of fixing the buildings and the hardship of tearing down many old apartments that provide low-rent homes for poor people.

O'Connor, the Long Beach director of building and safety from 1949-76, says Los Angeles officials don't really need a new ordinance but could tackle the problem with condemnation laws already on the books.

'If a big quake were to hit Los Angeles today, it would be a disaster . . . no question about it'

"The Los Angeles and San Francisco building safety managers have both ducked the earthquake safety problem by saying they have to solve their social and economic problems," O'Connor said. "Hell, we never solved them in Long Beach."

O'Connor said he started condemning hazardous old buildings in the late 1950s.

"The building owners jumped up and down and said what an SOB I was," he recalled. "We just flat-out condemned them."

O'Connor said he asked the Los Angeles director of building safety to do the same but "he told me he wasn't in a position to take it on. So, hell, I went on alone."

Frank Kroeger, the man responsible for dealing with old buildings for the Los Angeles Department of Building and Safety, agreed he could go after the old buildings without a new ordinance.

"There is probably a way you could do it, but it would be very cumbersome," Kroeger said. "I realize those buildings are hazardous, but I would rather see the City Council give good consideration to the plan than go off half-cocked."

Arthur Mann, vice chairman of the 1971 Earthquake Commission, said the matter of old buildings "is a tough problem. You have to weigh the economic loss against the potential loss of human life. I'm satisfied the City Council is moving, but I don't think it's moving fast enough."

The commission's No. 2 recommendation was that existing dams be brought up to modern standards of safety or their use restricted. The 1971 quake damaged two dams and "very nearly caused a catastrophe," the commission's report noted.

Only two of the county's 18 dams have been studied and brought up to standards, said Al Swanson, head of the Flood Control District's dam investigations section. Two others have been restricted for use because studies showed remedial work should be done. One dam has been found to need remedial work but has not been repaired or restricted for use, Swanson said.

The other 13 dams have not been examined although investigations are under way on three of them, Swanson said.

Can the dams withstand a major quake?

"I can't really say that because they haven't all been analyzed," said Swanson. "But I have no real fears about any of our dams."

A recent state law requires an evacuation plan from each area likely to be flooded if a dam gives way. Hartzell Schleeter, state emergency services coordinator, said he has received only six of about 50 evacuation plans needed for Los Angeles County.

"If we have a major earthquake in Los Angeles County, some areas will be caught without an evacuation plan," Schleeter said. "The local governments have been rather slow and are depriving their citizens of adequate protection."

Individual residents have also been slow in protecting themselves. The 1971 report estimated that very few area homeowners had earthquake insurance. Insurance company underwriters give current estimates of as low as 2 per cent.

'Time is short,' Zambia president warns Young

ZANZIBAR, Tanzania (AP) — President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said Saturday that intervention by the United States in support of black majority rule in southern Africa would help avoid bloodshed.

But he warned visiting U.S. envoy Andrew Young, "Time is short."

Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, met Kaunda on a goodwill and factfinding tour undertaken at the request of President Carter. The two talked for an hour at the waterfront Bwawani Hotel on this tropical spice island in the Indian Ocean where Tanzania is closing a week-long political celebration including visits of neighboring leaders.

"Let the U.S. take over the leadership in pursuing majority rule in southern Africa if they are interested in avoiding racial confrontation complicated by ideological confrontation," Kaunda told reporters after his talk with the 44-year-old ambassador. "We want it peacefully solved. If it continues we'll fight to the end.

"U.S. intervention would help us avoid bloodshed. All I can say is time is short. What I would like to say is that the Carter administration should take the lead in helping solve the Rhodesian situation, the Namibian situation and indeed the southern African situation."

Kaunda made clear he did not mean military intervention, but beyond that did not say what action he expected of the United States. "Who am I to tell the U.S. what to do?" he asked.

Young told reporters his conversations with African leaders gathered for the Tanzanian celebrations were "far more substantive and even moderate" than their public statements and his briefing notes had led him to expect. In addition to Kaunda, he has had talks with President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and the leaders of Burundi, Rwanda, Somalia and the Comoro Islands.

Young said he did not consider the prospect of Marxist governments sprouting in southern Africa a threat to the United States.

"What is a Marxist government?" Young continued. "If Angola is a Marxist state and its major trading partner is the United States, that does not worry me."

He said Nyerere had assured him that "in truth no African nation will become Communist."

"He said there may be intellecutual Marxists among the leaders, but that didn't mean they were going to set up Communist states."

"One of the most wholesome things about our administration is that ... it won't be paranoid about Communism," Young said.

Takes offer, to leave freeze for California

FOND DU LAC, Wis. (AP) — A Wisconsin family plans to pull up stakes and head for California after accepting Harold Stark's offer of lodging for someone eager to flee the bitter Midwestern winter.

But Thomas Sampson and his wife, Dolores, say they are leaving Fond du Lac in favor of Sunnyvale, Calif., for economic reasons rather than out of disgust over the severe cold this winter.

Sampson, an electronics technician who has lived here for 46 of his 55 years, has been out of work since going on strike 16 months ago at the manufacturing plant where he worked. The firm, Giddings & Lewis, Inc., eventually hired other workers and continued operations.

"We got to the point that we didn't know if we could pay our bills," Mrs. Sampson said Saturday. "I have been praying desperately for a long time and had almost given up hope. This is just too miraculous."

Stark and his wife, Frances, who live in a large mobile home in Sunnyvale, had said they wanted to "open our home to a couple who'd like to get out of the cold" in the East or Midwest.

"It's so cold in the East and there are people out of work and having trouble making ends meet," Mrs. Stark said. "Maybe it would be cheaper for someone there to come out here and get warm."

The Sampsons heard a radio report that the Starks were willing to share their two-bedroom, two-bathroom mobile home.

Mrs. Sampson telephoned Mrs. Stark on Thursday morning and the two found they had quite a bit in common.

The offer was made and accepted, and Sampson now plans to leave in about a week to live with the Starks and look for permanent employment in California.

There will be no discussion of these items unless members of the council request specific items to be removed from the calendar and considered after regular business items on the agenda.

San Bernardino County Planning Director Ken Topping will present the evaluation and allocation of home building in the West End area.

The Recreation Committee will make recommendations for the use of a new community center, based upon recent committee meetings.

Per capita tax burdens at the state and local levels ranged from a high of $1,025 in New York to a low of $405 in Arkansas during fiscal 1975, according to the Commerce Clearing House.

Steak house readied

The Claremont Planning Commission has granted a conditional use permit to restaurant owner Anthony Plascencia to serve alcoholic beverages in a proposed restaurant at the former California Highway Patrol headquarters building at Indian Hill Boulevard and the San Bernardino Freeway.

The new steak house will be the fifth restaurant in the vicinity of the freeway off-ramps.

The commission also has granted permission to Stuart and Mary Stoddard to build an addition to their house at 605 W. 10th St. A variance was required because the addition would extend into a required eight-foot sideyard.

The commission rezoned the south side of Base Line Road from Mountain Avenue to Indian Hill Boulevard as commercial-professional. Some of the land has been zoned as single-family.

The commission agreed that the boundaries of the proposed Piedmont Mesa annexation are appropriate to aid in the orderly development of growth of the city according to its general plan. The area had been prezoned single-family. The area contains 263 homes and 846 residents. An annexation election may be scheduled Nov. 8.

The commission learned that the city staff has approved a special permit to allow the Claremont University Center to erect an eight-foot-high chain link fence topped by barbed wire around a proposed biological field station east of the Santa Ana Botanic Garden.

The commission also learned that the staff has received a request from Southern California Gas Co. to park an energy conservation trailer at Griswold's from Feb. 14 to 27.

He dreamed of becoming a pilot

Cooper: His one collision with authority was his last

EDITOR'S NOTE: Michael Cooper was a studious young man who dreamed of becoming a Navy pilot. His prospects seemed fine, but then things began to go wrong. His one collision with law and authority was his last, and his parents are still wondering how it could happen.

WAUNAKEE, Wis. (AP) — The three deputies making their way to a quiet rural home that November evening didn't expect any real trouble. All they had to do was to pick up a young college student the Navy said was absent without leave.

Inside his parents' home, Michael Cooper, 23, was waiting alone. Cooper had wanted to be a Navy pilot. But his love affair had cooled with the Navy. Now all he wanted was out — out so badly that earlier in the year he had written the Secretary of the Navy that he'd kill himself if compelled to serve.

The deputies knocked and, getting no answer, went inside through the unlocked door. Within a few minutes, all were wounded in a burst of fire and Cooper lay dead on his bed.

A coroner's jury later ruled it suicide.

What happened Nov. 3 is enveloped in controversy and recrimination. But how Michael died is less important to his parents, Harvey and Mildred Cooper, than why.

Did the deputies have the authority to enter the home without a warrant. Was the Navy to blame for holding Michael to the contract under his ROTC Scholarship, the tangled dispute that led to his death?

Parents and Navy officials see most of the questions differently.

The elder Cooper, an insurance underwriter who served in combat in World War II and was a law enforcement officer for six years after that, says bitterly, "My thinking has changed about what law and order and fair government meant, everything I believed in."

Says his wife, "We want to see changes made so that no other young man has to go through this kind of entrapment."

The Navy doesn't look at it as entrapment. Michael, the Navy men feel, accepted his obligations under the scholarship with open eyes and then tried to evade them.

In their home that still shows the bullet holes, his parents talk of legal action against the Navy and local law enforcement officials.

They moved here six years ago, to the Madison area, from a small town 100 miles away so their son could attend a bigger high school.

As a senior, he won a four-year scholarship (Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps NROTC) to the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Michael's dream was to be a Navy pilot. He wore his uniform even when he didn't have to, putting it on to cross picket lines of antiwar demonstrators in 1971.

He was a good student, described by professors as brilliant in subjects he liked, such as physics and mathematics. He was quiet, handsome, just under six feet tall.

"We built our life around that kid," says Mrs. Cooper. Michael was the last of four children still at home. "He always studied. He didn't drink or smoke or go out with girls. He said there was plenty of time for girls when he was done with his studies."

After his second year in college, during a summer training cruise when Michael had already flown a jet, the Navy disqualified him from pilot training because he had hay fever.

"They knew he had hay fever from the beginning," says Mrs. Cooper. "He put it on the form himself when he was a freshman, but they said it wouldn't keep him from becoming a pilot."

Michael could have dropped out of ROTC then, halfway through the four-year program, but he opted to try for one of 25 places in the nuclear power training program. He finished No. 30.

Micahel then decided to drop out — disenroll, the Navy calls it — from

ABOUT THE ACT

The Housing and Community Development Act combined a wide variety of Federal grant and loan programs for housing, community development and public services into a single community-wide grant. It permits Pomona to plan for and develop programs to achieve the goals of housing conservation and economic development.

The Act focuses on the needs of low and moderate income citizens and on neighborhoods which are blighted or are in danger of becoming blighted. It relates to other matters as well. A section of particular interest to Pomona concerns COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

This section of the Act consolidated all existing, but separately funded grants into a new program of Community Development Block Grants (CDBG). To receive these funds, Pomona was required to develop a three-year Community Development Plan and is required to develop a one-year action program for each year of funding.

The purpose of this section of the Act is twofold. First, it calls for the provision of adequate housing, a suitable living environment, and expanded economic opportunity. Second, it provides financial assistance yearly to encourage community development activities consistent with local and area-wide priorities. Together, these purposes are designed to foster coordination of housing and community development activities in support of each other.

Grant funds may be spent for the following types of projects:

1. Street lighting;
2. Senior citizen facilities;
3. Acquisition and construction of parking facilities;
4. Installation of traffic signals;
5. Removal of blighting conditions;
6. Beautification;
7. Community development planning;
8. Demolition of substandard buildings; and
9. Payment of non-federal local shares of grants for community development.

Certain projects are not eligible as CDBG activities. These include:

1. Construction of public buildings or publicly-used facilities for spectator-type activities, or their operating expenses;
2. School terminals; generally;
3. Bus or other transit terminals;
4. General government expenses;
5. Political activities;
6. New housing construction; and
7. Operation and maintenance expenses.

CITIZEN PARTICIPATION

Suggestions and comments from the public on community development needs and priorities are invited by the City. These may be submitted in writing to the Office of the Mayor and City Council prior to February 9, 1977. The Office address is: Pomona City Hall, 505 S. Garey Ave., Pomona, Calif. 91766; telephone 620-2051.

Residents are also encouraged to express their views in person by attending public hearings scheduled as follows:

Wednesday, February 9, 1977, 7:30 p.m.
Conference Room
Pomona Public Library
625 S. Garey Ave.

Tuesday, February 15, 1977, 3:00 p.m.
Boards and Commissions Room
Pomona City Hall
505 S. Garey Ave.

Oral presentations will be limited to five minutes per speaker. Submission of written material in addition to spoken comments is welcomed at both hearings.

At these two public hearings, the City staff will present the preliminary CDBG funding proposal for 1977-78. A question and answer period will follow. Afterwards, public presentations and written submissions will be considered for incorporation into a CDBG funding proposal which is to be presented for City Council consideration and approval.

Pomona's application for community development funds will reflect the public input. All interested persons will be heard. Public meetings were scheduled in the evening and afternoon hours as a convenience to interested citizens.

Technical assistance from City staff members is available upon request.

ROTC altogether even though he was in his senior year.

The Navy said it was too late and warned him if he refused to serve as an officer he would have to serve two years as an enlisted man.

Otto Krueger, Michael's commanding officer at the Madison ROTC unit, recommended that he be relieved of his obligation as unfit.

"He showed what was to me a disturbingly inflated sense of self-confidence, that he was superior to other people," Krueger said at the inquest into Michael's death. "He had the opinion that enlisted men essentially were vegetables and that he could not look his friends in the eye or himself in the mirror as an enlisted man."

Krueger said he urged a Navy personnel review board in Washington to let Michael "beat the system" by getting a free education since there was no other way Navy regulations to make up the debt for the four-year scholarship. But the personnel board refused, ordering Michael to report to Treasure Island Naval Base near San Francisco as an enlisted man.

Michael responded by sending a registered letter to Navy Secretary William Middendorf II, warning that he would kill himself before he would serve. There was no reply.

Mildred and Harvey Cooper, meanwhile, offered through Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., to repay the scholarship money if the Navy would rescind the induction order.

Proxmire said the Navy told him there was no provision for such a repayment. A Navy Department spokesman in Washington said the Coopers never made such an offer.

The Navy statement said in part:

"Seaman Apprentice Cooper was fully aware of his option, during his first two years of participation, to drop out of his own will, without incurring obligated military service.

"In monetary terms, Seaman Apprentice Cooper received educational benefits at taxpayer expense amounting to over $6,500."

The Navy had no other comment pending the outcome of its own investigation by regional Naval headquarters in Great Lakes, Ill.

The coroner's jury issued an unusual advisory opinion along with its suicide findings which criticized the Navy!

"The jury . . . hopes in the future that the Naval ROTC and the Department of the Navy would show more concern for its members on an individual basis. In the future, when problems arise all means of solving them should be fully explored."

The Coopers' lawyer, Eric Schulenberg of Madison, said he may take legal action against the Navy but is more likely to move first against local officials on constitutional grounds.

He said the three deputies may have violated Fourth Amendment protections of privacy and security when they entered the Cooper home with only a Navy pickup order instead of a court-ordered search or arrest warrant.

At the inquest, the deputies said they called out when they walked in the door, but went upstairs and began searching rooms when no one responded. Then, they said:

They pushed past a makeshift barricade blocking the door to Michael's room. Deputy John Carter slid open the closet door. Michael was inside with a gun and fired at Carter. The bullet grazed his head. Carter fell and began firing at the closet as the other deputies, John Javorsky and Robert Driefke, took cover in an adjacent bedroom, exchanging fire with Cooper.

When Cooper stopped shooting the deputies found him on his bed with a massive chest wound.

The main issue in determining the constitutional question seems to be whether the Navy pickup order had the force of search warrants.

"I didn't think any non-military authorities went out and started looking for somebody on the basis of one of these forms," said a Navy spokesman in the Judge Advocate General's legal corps in Washington. "The order is to pick the subject up if they see the subject, more so than a directive to pick him up."

A sheriff's official said the matter was routine, and the deputies were within their legal bounds. The county district attorney agreed.

The Coopers had gone out to dinner that fatal evening but returned home when they heard police sirens in the area.

They contend the officers, knowing Michael had threatened suicide and might resist, should have waited for the parents before entering the house, and they complained that after the shooting, they were refused entrance to their home and weren't told of Michael's death for two hours.

Mrs. Cooper doesn't think her son tried to kill the deputies.

"He was hiding in a closet, trying to avoid an altercation," she says. "He was a crack shot, and if he had tried to kill them there would have been three dead deputies."

She paused and added quietly: "There were so many things that didn't need to happen. Michael may have killed himself, but there were other fingers on the trigger."

Boosts psychic energy, improves sex life?

Power of 'pyramid' profits prophets, draws devotees

EDITOR'S NOTE: If you are to believe the believers, a pyramid in your home, your office, or even your hospital bed will do wonders for you. Scientists may scoff, but pyramidologists carry on, and for some there's gold in it.

By CINDY ROSE
Associated Press Writer

According to a widening circle of devotees, pyramids provide new power for the people. They can sharpen razor blades, sweeten wine, cure sick plants, lessen pain, improve sex life and boost psychic energy.

The lack of scientific evidence to support such claims hasn't daunted the legion of believers: housewives, athletes, gardeners — and pyramid salesmen.

"It seems so funny. Who wouldn't laugh? It seems like a big hoax, like a pet rock, until you try a pyramid yourself and see that it really does do some things people claim it does," says Rick Tiller, a 26-year-old pyramid proponent from Pittsfield, Mass.

It all works, if you believe the faithful, by putting yourself or whatever you want treated under or directly ove the apex of a precisely positioned scale model of the Great Pyramid of Cheops in Egypt.

The scientific community has greeted such notions with resounding skepticism.

"I never saw the energy," says Dr. George Alexandrakis, head of the physics department at the University of Miami. "I think physicists just dismiss this pyramid thing completely. It has nothing to do with reality."

But the scientists' frowns haven't stopped the pyramidologists.

—The Toronto Maple Leafs started Stanley Cup hockey playoffs with a single pyramid under the bench but soon had multicolored ones scattered in strategic positions around the rink.

"They send a vibration, a wonderful vibration," Coach Red Kelly said after a winning game. He wasn't so enthusiastic when Toronto lost the series 3-4.

—When Ted Sizemore played for the Los Angeles Dodgers last year he put a foot-square pyramid in his locker and said the team lost most road games when he didn't have the pyramid along. "There's gotta be something to it," he says.

—A Winter Garden, Fla., car dealership opened three showrooms under pyramids. Owner Al Ewing got into it unwittingly and laughed when he discovered he had joined a fad. "But I started asking the salesmen, and they say cars really do sell better under the pyramid," he says.

—A slew of razor blades are reposing inside scale-model pyramids in bathrooms in Europe, Canada, the United States and behind the Iron Curtain. Users claim the pyramids keep the blades sharp.

—Drs. Leonard Linkow of New York and Paris Garefis of Los Angeles, both dentists, are experimenting with pyramids to determine if the geometric shape improves a patient's ability to accept dental implants. Garefis has 72 pyramids hanging in two rows from an operating room ceiling. "We haven't stopped any conventional dental methods, so there is no way I can tell you whether the pyramid really works," he says. "But a lot of people think it helps. Maybe it's just psychological."

—A colony of believers has started construction on a dozen pyramid-shaped homes on 110 acres near the Central Florida community of Bell.

—An eight-page newsletter published bimonthly in Santa Barbara, Calif., claims circulation of 6,000. Subscribers pay $6 a year.

Nobody's gathered figures on the number of pyramid power devotees, but through advertisements and word-of-mouth support the fad has become widely visible.

"It's blowing my mind," says Shelly Seigel, production manager of a Santa Monica, Calif., wholesale firm that supplies pyramids. "There are always the fanatics who say their fingers work better under a pyramid — a segment of the population is always a little screwy. But then there are people who just say it works."

Seigel got into it solely as a business. "It's just a fact to me whether they're selling or not selling. And they're selling."

Seigel says sales records for his firm show that more than 100,000 people have bought six-foot pyramids at $89.95 retail in the past five years. He figures a recent order for 25,000 boxes of 9-and 12-inch pyramids, selling upwards from $6.95, will be gone within a month.

"What's important, though, is that for every person who buys a pyramid, there's at least an equal number building their own," he says.

Tobin says anybody can try it simply by cutting four isosceles triangles with two equal sides 11.4 inches and base 12 inches square, taping them together, making sure the angles of the base are exactly 90 degrees, and aligning any side of the pyramid with a compass along the earth's magnetic north.

"I've used pyramids to sharpen razor blades, help sick plants get healthy, sweeten wine. I use the pyramid in meditation aid in my work in hypnosis with athletes," Tobin says.

While pyramids have long fascinated dabblers in the occult, the current craze seems to have its inception in a book called "Psychic Discoveries Behind the Ironin." The book, published in 1970, told about a Czech, Karel Drbal, who may have been the first to claim the razor blade affinity for the pyramids. He patented the shape in 1959 and soon produced miniature cardboard pyramids for the bathroom.

Pyramidologists like to point to G. Patrick Flanagan as a scientist who takes the pyramid seriously. Flanagan, 32, was listed in "Who's Who in American Science" at 15 because of his work with lasers, microwaves and other energy forms.

He became interested in pyramids in 1970, proclaiming his enthusiasm for pyramids as powerful receptacles for a form of energy hicalled "biocosmic." Since then, dozens of companies have become involved in pyramid promotion and sales, as has Flanagan himself.

Flanagan likens the pyramid to a directional antenna. "The energy is already there, and the pyramid just transmits it," he says. "There's phenomenon connected with the pyramid."

What about those ancient originals, the pyramids of the pharaohs? Most scholars consider them tombs — elaborate, majestic, built in conformity with Egyptian religion and ritual, but just tombs. Today's pyramidologists believe the Egyptians knew all about pyramid power.

Researchers who take the time to experiment with pyramids tend to be people who want them to work, Dr. Marshall Gilula, a Miami psychiatrist, says. He suggests the pyramid might work like a placebo — medicine without effectiveness in itself but which the patient thinks helps him — and which therefore does help in a way.

Red, white and blue wardrobe

CHESTER, Va. (AP) — For most Americans, the Bicentennial is over, but for Hazel Burton it'll last as long as her clothes do.

Mrs. Burton celebrated the nation's 200th birthday last year by acquiring a red, white and blue wardrobe.

"I wondered if I could wear red, white and blue all year," she says. "I found I could. I have navy pants, red pants, blouses, dresses — just everything you can think of. My husband even gave me a red, white and blue umbrella.

Mrs. Burton also has blue ashtrays, candles and pillows at home, and small flags in her flowerpots. Her bedroom is blue, with red and white candles. The Burtons had a red, white and blue Christmas tree.

Acne — Is It Treatable?

In just a few weeks from now, your mirror could reflect very good news. It could tell you that you no longer suffer from acne.

This is recent news, the result of experiments conducted by the nation's top skin specialists on the staffs of major medical schools.

The story began in Germany several years ago, when scientists learned that a by-product of Vitamin A had the ability to act on the skin pores.

This substance, called Vitamin A acid, was tested in America by the nation's leading medical school dermatologists.

They found that by adjusting the strength of the preparation to the individual patient's tolerance level, they could loosen the "bunched" dead cells lining the skin pores.

It is the "bunching" of the cells which finally plugs the pores and sets up the acne possibility, beginning with whiteheads and blackheads.

Further experiments followed. The scientists learned that by adding a further step, the application of prescription-strength Benzoyl Peroxide Gel, they could kill the acne bacteria itself.

Thus, combining the one-two step treatment, 85 per cent of patients treated in the medical school clinics found themselves free of acne in six to 12 weeks.

It was momentous news, the first effective treatment yet devised for the age-old skin disease. The method was recorded in the nation's medical journals.

This treatment is now available at the Acne Care Medical Clinics Inc., supervised by Dr. Jack Kramer, Board Certified Dermatologist, a specialist in skin care for 25 years. Acne Care Medical Clinics are located in Costa Mesa, Huntington Beach, Fullerton, Inglewood and Covina. For further information phone (213) 966-1771.

There is no longer any need to suffer from the ravages of acne. It is no longer an untreatable mystery.

Dear Mayor Lepire:

As I leave my post as Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, I would like to take a moment to thank you for the cooperation you have shown me and this Department over the past two years.

I am especially delighted to note that through our joint planned program approach, the City of Pomona and HUD have been able to reduce the number of HUD-held properties in Pomona from over 3,000 to a handfull of less than 100. You rehabilitated some of those properties and sold them, thus helping to preserve some neighborhoods and improving the community's tax base. You and the City Council are to be commended for your efforts and results in this area.

Again, thanks for working with me and my best wishes for the future.

Uncle Sam 'campaigns' to keep Americans beautiful

EDITOR'S NOTE: Uncle Sam, with no special fanfare, has embarked on a program to help keep America beautiful. The IRS says facelifts, nose jobs and figure-flattering surgery are tax deductible. A doctor who reforms Hollywood stars and housewives says it is probably our only such luxury.

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The facelift, an operation once mentioned in whispers and attempted only by daring movie stars, is becoming as respectable as a trip to the dentist, says a leading Hollywood surgeon.

If you don't believe him, ask Uncle Sam.

The Internal Revenue Service, of all places, recently issued a ruling to answer an apparently burning question of many citizens: Is a facelift tax deductible?

The answer is, "Yes," placing cosmetic surgery within the federal definition of medical care "for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body."

Implicitly, the ruling also covers improvements such as breast enlargements, nose jobs, belly reduction and ear flattening.

"Our inquiries on the subject have skyrocketed since the revenue ruling was issued," says Charles Dougherty of the Los Angeles IRS office.

For the past two or three years, he said, his office has felt that a facelift was deductible. But there was no written ruling.

"This really nails it down," said Beverly Hills tax attorney Bob Forst, who has confronted the question with some of his clients. Now, he predicts, more people may use the deduction.

"It's a fair conclusion that if it is publicized, more taxpayers will be taking advantage of it," said Forst.

Even before the ruling, facelifts had been gaining middleclass popularity.

"It's no longer just for movie stars and the rich," says Dr. Robert A. Franklyn. "It's for everybody. And now it's probably our only tax deductible luxury.

"Plastic surgery is becoming as common as kids getting their teeth straightened."

Franklyn, 58, celebrated inventor of the breast implant operation in the 1950s, has been a sculptor of famous faces and figures for more than 30 years. Business, he says, has never been so lively.

"We are in the age of the youth and beauty culture, and people are more liberated," he says. "They take more pride in their appearance than they did 30 or 40 years ago."

There are no figures available on the actual numbers of facelifts and other cosmetic surgery performed in the United States, says a spokesman for the 1,700-member American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, headquartered in Chicago. But he says, "It's everybody's impression that it's increasing."

He said the capitals of cosmetic surgery are Los Angeles, Miami and New York City but that doctors in places as remote as Billings, Mont., are getting more requests for facelifts.

"It's a nationwide phenomenon," he said.

Franklyn says one contributing factor is that a facelift is a much easier procedure these days.

"Most of our surgery now is simple and fast, which appeals to the public," says Franklyn.

With the use of local anaesthetic, Franklyn claims he can do a facelift in 30 minutes, a breast enlargement in nine minutes and a nose reduction in 10 to 12 minutes.

A few years ago, a facelift took a minimum of four hours on the operating table and several days of hospitalization. Franklyn, who operates at his "Beauty Pavilion" on Hollywood's busy Sunset Strip, sends patients home the same day.

Other plastic surgeons confirmed that new methods have sliced large amounts of time off cosmetic operations to the patient's benefit. Quick surgery, they say, results in less swelling and discoloration, thus lessening recovery time.

But other time estimates were higher than Franklyn's speed record.

Dr. Richard Cavanaugh of Beverly Hills says he still allows about two hours for a full facelift — longer if it's for a man. "One out of every 10 facelifts is done on a man," he said, but men's beards complicate the procedure.

Cavanaugh sends patients from his clinic to a private convalescent hospital for a day or two "to make sure they get adequate care."

The trend is away from hospitals and toward European-style private clinics which offer a more glamorous atmosphere.

Franklyn's circular salon was designed by United Nations architect Oscar Neimeyer and features a skylight in the operating room.

Cavanaugh is preparing to open a new beauty spa at Pala Mesa near San Diego which incorporates tennis, golf, weight reduction and cosmetic surgery.

However, the clinics' big lure is secrecy. At a clinic, there's no chance a gall bladder patient will spot a neighbor having a facelift.

Obviously, one element of cosmetic surgery has not changed — few patients want the world to know they've been altered. The exception was comedienne Phyllis Diller who bragged about her makeover.

Franklyn, who works on many celebrities, says, "Nobody seems to tell anything because they feel people will look at them as artificial. Once a movie star becomes identifiable, they want to keep their features just as they are. We have to keep them young but not scramble their features."

Although he does facelifts and breast implants on "ordinary housewives," Franklyn sees cosmetic surgery as most essential for those in show business and politics — "the personality businesses."

"These people can't afford to grow old gracelessly," says Franklyn. "If you're old in show business, you're out of a job unless you're a character actor. In politics, well, let's just say that one fellow might be President of the United States if he'd gotten a facelift." He said he was referring to Ronald Reagan.

Come back, Uncle Sam is sorry

MADISON, Wis. (AP)— Uncle Sam wants YOU, Mark Hanneman, so he can apologize for discharging you by mistake and welcome you back into the Army.

Mrs. L. M. Hanneman believes that her son, Mark, 20, is in South Florida and would like to give him the good news.

So would Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., who took an interest in the case after learning about the Army's mistake.

A Kastenmeier aide, Otto Festqe, said Hanneman was discharged Dec. 9 at Ft. Gordon, Ga., on the basis of faulty information that he had served a prison sentence.

Hanneman was traced to Jacksonville, where on Dec. 20 he tried to reenlist. A recruiter told him to return next day, but he didn't.

Mrs. Hanneman said Mark had been in juvenile court in his youth but was never sentenced to an institution. She said he told recruiters about the incident and they said it would not go against him.

Chino is free to continue development program

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

The City of Chino apparently is free to continue its federal community development program as planned.

No protests were heard this week at a City Council public hearing, as councilmen considered an application for $474,000 in federal funds for the third year of the Community Development Block Grant Program.

The council continued the public hearing until Feb. 15, when citizen input again will be sought. Councilmen had only minor questions themselves concerning progress of the program.

Officials have noted that the community has indicated "strong support" of the planned projects. The application for federal funds for the 1977-78 year is expected to be approved following the Feb. 15 meeting.

A five-year development program was tentatively approved two years ago, and the city has received $474,000 for each of the first two years of the plan.

Priorities of the program — which is directed toward deteriorating areas of town — are subject to review each year.

The bulk of the funding has been used to "improve the total living environment" in Chino's barrio area. A major project has been development of the Monte Vista Park site at Monte Vista Avenue and D Street.

The proposal for 1977-78 includes $93,000 for development of the park site; $45,000 for replacement of substandard sewer lines; $76,000 for work on substandard water lines; $55,000 for unpaved alleys; $40,000 for missing curbs; $15,000 for tie-in paving; $65,000 for sidewalks.

Also, funds are proposed for a landscaped buffer along Chino Avenue, $25,000; a rehabilitation program, $30,000; and planning and engineering, $30,000.

Future development of Monte Vista Park will include a recreation center on the site, city officials note.

The Community Action Council, a group of barrio residents, has been involved in the planning of the development proposals.

Local trial delayed

The Pomona Superior Court trial of three El Monte area men, arrested in connection with the slaying Aug. 22 of a man outside an El Monte apartment building, has been continued to Feb. 28.

The three are Anthony Edward Sinohue, 26, accused of the fatal stabbing, and his alleged companions, Armando Rene Arce, 29, and Daniel Lopez Mendoza, 21.

The victim was Dennis J. Biscayart, 26, who worked in a liquor store near the apartment building at 10050 Valley Blvd.

Police said the stabbing followed an argument involving the victim and the defendants. Biscayart was stabbed to death with a half a pair of grass shears.

The charges against the trio include murder, attempted murder, and assault with a deadly weapon.

Wheeling with feeling— 'freeway derby' delightful

Editor's note: Many readers responded to the Jan. 24 feature on the entertainment value of taking part each workday in the Great Southern California Freeway Derby, prompting the following.

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

"I read your article on the Freeway Derby and enjoyed it very much," wrote Tina Zielomski of Diamond Bar.

"I chuckled as it brought back memories of one of my most interesting freeway drives, and had to pass it on to you."

Mrs. Zielomski said she got on the Santa Monica Freeway in Torrance on her way to Century Boulevard.

"I looked across in the third lane at this luxurious black car beside me and just about lost control of my car.

"Here was a portly gentleman, a huge cigar in his mouth, shaving with an electric razor.

"I was absolutely fascinated. The shaving I felt I could have taken, but the cigar just got me. Needless to say, I kept right along side him. When he had finished shaving, low and behold, didn't the star of my day reach down and pick up a telephone, put it on a shoulder cradle and start chatting merrily away.

"Century Boulevard was zooming ahead for me and, to my sorrow, I had to take the offramp, ending the little drama."

Others asked quite seriously, "Haven't you ever noticed how many people drink coffee while they drive the freeway in the morning?"

"You completely left out what I enjoy most — girl watching," said John Ardelan of Upland, Progress Bulletin circulation manager who recently moved in from Victorville.

Others reported seeing people speeding down freeways reading books, reading road maps, engaged in fist-shaking arguments, spanking children, listening to taped music with headphones clamped over their ears and even (this was a woman of course) unwinding curlers, combing out hair and applying makeup.

Everyone, it seems, is paying a lot of attention to the personalized license plates.

Betty Rankard, an executive secretary with Donrey Media Group, Pomona, recognized " NABORR," one plate used to illustrate the Jan. 24 story. Naborr, according to Miss Rankard, is a very valuable, imported Polish stallion, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Chauncy, Scottsdale, Ariz., Arabian horse breeders.

Chauncy's daughter, Missdee, was in Pomona that week. She had brought Madrygal, son of Naborr, to the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds.

Miss Rankard owns a Polish colt whose sire and Naborr are half brothers.

"I just couldn't believe it when I saw that license plate," she said. "I wondered if you had sent a photographer to Scottsdale.

"That horse is the Chauncys' pride and joy. Naborr's stud fee is $5,000. He is 27 years old and one of the most famous and beautiful stallions in the United States.

Other readers called to report personalized license plates they had seen. Included were "GO4GOD," "BG MAC," "ACHOO," "DERBUS," "WHAMMO," "CAVE 1," "BUYPLY," "ALOHA" AND "T CART."

On some, meanings are clear. On others, only the owners know for sure the meanings of their personalized, six-space messages.

BUGAROO? Is it a trailer or is it a Bug? Roderick Buttram admires his family's latest automotive acquisition, the Bugaroo, said to be one of only six of the strange craft made.

It's the latest thing

Bug-built 'Bugaroo' buzzing around town

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Bugaroo isn't coming, the Bugaroo is here.

The Bugaroo isn't a new dance nor is it an electronic eavesdropping tool or flu virus. The Bugaroo is the latest thing in family transportation, however, and one of the few in existence can be found at the home Esther Miller, Pomona.

From a distance, the Volkswagon-manufactured vehicle resembles a football helmet with Jimmy Durante's nose protruding as it travels down the street.

Close up you would think the crazy inventor down the block had gone berserk with a welding torch to combine a trailer and VW Bug.

Mrs. Miller says two of the strange craft were on display at last fall's Los Angeles County Fair, but that she didn't get hooked on it until she and her husband were driving through Downey last November.

"We drove by a dealer's lot and I saw it sitting there so we stopped to look at it. I decided it was unique and about 10 minutes later it was mine. And we hadn't intended to buy a car or anything." For the Millers and their 11 children, the Bugaroo has been a real find. The car has two beds inside as well as loads of cargo space.

Mrs. Miller said, "We've had all the kids in there at one time and there's room for all of them. The front is like a regular Bug so there is more storage room up under the hood."

The Bugaroo is equipped with a VW van engine and the Millers have added a few niceties including chrome wheels and a few drapery appointments to the interior. The car is remarkably well equipped, however, with its regular features which include the sleeping areas and carpeting.

Mrs. Miller said she was told VW had manufactured only six of the strange cars and that she has seen another one in the valley. She said it cost the Millers $3,600 but that she has already been offered $6,000.

Owning the unique vehicle has changed the Miller's transportation habits a bit. They are always being called on to show off the car and explain its various and sundry features.

"I took it to church last week," she said, "and everybody wanted to see it. I was up at Pep Boys a few days ago and checked the clock to find out that I spent a solid half hour showing it to people up there."

One man followed her for five miles in order to get a look at the car. When she stopped, he got out of his car and said, "Thank heavens you finally stopped. I've been trying for five miles to get a look at it."

Despite its unstable look, Mrs. Miller says the car handles well although it will sway a bit in a high wind. She says the Millers are getting 24 miles to a gallon of gas with the new car.

"My friends ask me if it will climb a hill and I tell them 'It sure will'," she said. "I take it into the hills in and around Los Angeles all the time and I never have any trouble with it."

Although the car is called a Bugaroo by Volkswagon, Mrs. Miller says her family has renamed it "the Venus Bug".

Valley residents conserve energy

Mid-West woes prompt efforts to save fuel

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

Compassion for the idle, cold in the mid-West and Eastern states, and a sincere desire to comply with requests to conserve energy, are prompting valley residents to use less natural gas.

Don Crawford, Pomona district manager for the Southern California Gas Co., said valley residents do appear to be complying with requests made by Public Utilities Commission, the utility and by President Carter and gas savings locally of 20 per cent are anticipated.

"People here are recognizing the hardships caused by the gas shortage in other parts of the country, and it is beginning to show."

As suggested by President Carter, it appears many valley residents are setting thermostats at 65 during the daytime and 55 at night.

Crawford said all gas company bases have restricted heating to 65 during business hours. 'We are shutting it completely off at night and during weekends.

"We have for five years carried out an agressive voluntary conservation program, and we will continue to do so. This includes cutting out the luxury uses of gas such as heating swimming pools, decorating homes and businesses with night lighting and gas-burning fireplaces."

The utility rewards commercial establishments which make conservation efforts. "The Pomona Valley Community Hospital has received a conservation award," said Crawford.

"While conservation is clearly important to provide natural gas for other parts of the nation, it will not overcome our increasing shortages. The need is for new supplies,

"Unless we want to see the same headlines that are currently appearing in the East out here in California, we must insist that construction begin this year on Liquefied Natural Gas receiving terminals."

Unemployment in California due to a natural gas shortage would be a more permanent thing.

Electric savings help, too

The need to conserve energy, and water, are serious concerns of Bob ImHof, Pomona area manager for the Southern California Edison Co.

"Because of the shortages, we cannot get natural gas now to produce electricity," said ImHof. "We are using imported crude oil. Last year we used 50 million barrels. There are 42 gallons to a barrel. That's why the cost of electricity is up.

"Two years ago, we were using 86 per cent natural gas fuel. By last year it had dropped to 16 per cent. Now we're on crude oil."

It isn't difficult to see the relationship of conserving electricity to conserving natural gas and, going one step further, to conserving water.

"When people set their forced-air furnaces at 65 degrees, or 55 degrees, less electricity is required to run the blower which circulates the air through the house, or the office building."

Great quantities of water are used to produce electricity, ImHof stressed, "and by summer the California water situation could be critical.

"It's all related," said ImHof. "We all must do everything we can to conserve energy and water."

ImHof said that two years ago SCE installed time clocks which shut off heat in all its facilities at 5 p.m. and this week lowered daytime temperatures from 68 to 65 degrees.

Patient abuse is exaggerated

The reports of mistreatment of residents at Pacific State Hospital through the use of so-called cattle prods and withholding meals were blown far out of proportion.

The use of electric stimulation to interrupt self-destructive behavior on patents so disabled that they have not responded to other therapy has been an accepted medical program for over 15 years.

The questioned treatment is being used on 14 of the 1,700 residents of the Pomona hospital for the mentally retarded as a last hope for behavioral change.

Medical authorities feel that, while electric shock is not as culturally accepted by the public, it is a more positive treatment than permanent restraints or deep drug sedation, other alternatives.

Psychologists say that while drugs and restraints may prevent these self-abusers from further damaging themselves or causing harm to others, they remove the patient from any interaction and do not help habilitate the person.

Electric shock, on the other hand, often changes the behavior of the patient and allows him the mobility to live a reasonable normal life — attend school, visit parents or participate in social programs.

Hospital personnel stress that the electric shock is not severe. It is brief, and, whenever possible, administered in private so that the patient's rights are protected.

It is unfortunate that many government officials are not aware — or don't take the time to become better informed — before they decry medical programs they don't understand.

The unfortunate situation was further aggravated by hospital officials and medical leaders who are unable to adequately explain their positions in terms the general public can understand.

Lesson in free enterprise

Everyone talks about the "economic illiteracy" of Americans, and now someone is doing something about it where it counts — at the elementary grade level.

Thousands of schoolchildren in the fourth through ninth grades are being introduced to the American economic system through a program called The American Way '76.

Developed by the National Schools Committee, a nonprofit foundation, the American Way kit teaches youngsters the principles, concepts and values underpinning the free private enterprise system through film-strip stories like that of a boy who spends his summer washing windows to earn money to buy a bicycle. The roles of free choice, profit, competition and enterprise are pointed up by comparing the boy's small business with that of the larger economic system, including the bicycle shop and manufacturers.

According to Dr. James A. Sensenbaugh, chairman of the National Schools Committee and superintendent of schools of the state of Maryland, by the time many students reach high school they not only lack knowledge about the American economic system, but worse, have a lot of wrong ideas about it.

For example, some 60 per cent of these students say they do not believe that profit is a valid motive for business, yet these same youngsters take on jobs to make money and expect a profit, or return for their investment of time, when they cut a lawn or baby sit.

Thus the great need for programs like The American Way '76, which help kids make the connection between their world and the economy as a whole.

Think on these things

Who keeps the time by which all our clocks are set? Who decides to the second when the sun is to rise and when it will set? Who gauges the speed of the wind — and who measures the rainfall and snowfall?

There are so many things we depend on without really giving thought to the source — but then we are even more oblivious to those basic things as well as the beautiful. Those things like time, the sunrise and sunset, the breezes, rainfall and snowfall — the change of seasons, the colors, the migration of birds — the pattern of life. Who keeps them all in order? When we can catch a glimpse of the overall perspective — how great and marvelous and orderly nature is — can't we pace ourselves a little better and know that we can be as orderly?

Saying no to Big Brother

Dear Editor:

"No alien army shall ever make a track on the Blue Ridge or take a drink from the Ohio (River). If this great nation dies, it will be from within."

So spoke a politically ambitious but totally unknown, self-educated young man before the Young Men's Lyceum in Illinois some 145 years ago. That quote of Abraham Lincoln's, lost almost 14 decades before it was rediscovered by researchers recently, never was more appropriate than today.

What would lawyer Lincoln think of his profession today if he could peruse some recent lower, appellate and supreme court decisions on both federal and state levels?

Lincoln believed the union of several states must survive as a whole or all the several states would perish as we knew them. Yet, as the first Republican president, he believed strongly in states rights and local control.

How would Lincoln react to citizens of Keokuk being forced to pay for downtown planter boxes and new curbing in Claremont, or taxpayers of Peoria forced to pay for grass seeding San Dimas' City Hall lawn under the euphemistically titled boondoggle of "federal revenue sharing?"

Appointed (not elected) city managers and administrators have a happy (if semantically immoral) method of cushioning such blows.

"These projects don't cost us a thing," they blithely say. "The money is coming from Washington," where, supposedly, a giant cornucopia spills forth dollar bills in an endless stream for those local communities in need far from Potomac shores.

If the people of Claremont really had wanted those planters — and few did — shouldn't they have paid for them? Likewise couldn't the people of San Dimas have coughed up enough scratch to sod City Hall's lawn?

Los Angeles County taxpayers are on the verge of a tax revolt following 1976 property reassessments.

Again, unelected city managers and county administrators attempted to hoodwink the public by stating that their expertise in fiscal matters allowed them to cut tax rates this year — not taxes but tax rates. Many homeowners fell for this double talk and were surprised to find whopping tax hikes in their pre-Christmas tax bills.

But the possible straw that broke the proverbial camel's back occurred when the ultra-liberal California Supreme Court declared, in the six-year-old Serrano vs. Priest school financing case, that the present method of financing schools by local property taxation is unconstitutional.

Now by 1980, state assemblymen must come up with a new method of school financing thereby wrenching the reins of local control from local school boards which will be rendered little more than figureheads from now on.

Already school trustees have little say on how funds are to be spent, employes hired, classes taught or pupils chastised, because of state and federal restrictions and limitations enforced when unsuspecting local agencies such as school boards and city councils accept gifts from Big Brother in Sacramento and Washington.

The Serrano vs. Priest decision ranks right up there with circumvention of the law by those elected or appointed to uphold the law with the several busing-to-achieve-racial-balance decisions handed down the past six years.

In the latter case, federal and state judges are violating the 1964 and 1968 federal civil rights acts which state, in essence, that no one shall be assigned or denied public accommodations, schools or transportation on the basis of race, religion or creed.

Federal and state judges are directly violating these acts by assigning students to various schools on the basis of race — a fact of life struck down 23 years ago by the U.S. Supreme Court when it nullified the Old South's hypocritical separate-but-equal schools scheme.

So-called learned justices on the state's highest court again usurped their trust and duty when they further emasculated local school boards by turning over control of local community schools to absentee landlords in Sacramento.

Lincoln's prophetic statement of 145 years ago should open local voter-taxpayers' eyes. March elections are only a month away.

Do we want local city councils and school boards who daily bow from waist and utter prayers of subservience to Washington and Sacramento or do we desire elected officials with guts enough to draw a line in the dirt with their toe and tell congressmen and legislators:

"Don't tread on me."

Laws protect criminals

Dear Editor:

Recently a fine, wonderful man was shot to death at his gas station at Garey Avenue and Philadelphia street in South Pomona. Such a needless killing. Timmy was a friend to everybody and liked by everyone who knew him. He will be sadly missed.

When are the courts and judges going to stop slapping the hands of these criminals? Something has got to be done to try and stop this constant rising crime rate in this country! Laws seem to be made to protect the criminals and they know it, and flout it.

Police are not doing their job, and when they are called you are lucky if you see them an hour later. People are afraid to leave their homes. If we can't protect ourselves and our families, then what do we have? If laws need to be changed, then for God's sake let's change them.

I'm so ashamed of our so-called free country. We're not free when we must live in constant fear of our lives. Things are pretty bad when our local dairy must hire an armed guard to protect its business.

Seems all our mayor and council is interested in is saving money instead of putting more policemen on to patrol our streets. From Garey to Reservoir there are no street lights, the streets are dark as coal at night.

Seems to us it would be up to the city to have proper lighting for the safety of the people. I can't see where Pomona does anything for its people. They're full of promises that are never kept. Like what ever happened to the housing that was supposed to be built for our elderly folks?

We just pray justice will be done when those men are found that killed Timmy. But, knowing our system, they'll be back on the streets in no time.

Carter unworried about Russia

WASHINGTON — Inside the oval office, a quietly confident Jimmy Carter is now examining the Big Picture. This is the view of the world that has been put together for him from the jigsaw pieces of intelligence which filter into the White House.

The view that has emerged from the intelligence reports and strategic analyses is dark with menace. One top-secret strategy study, summarized in National Security Memorandum 246, shows Soviet military strength on the rise and American might on the decline. The study concludes that the Soviets are aggressively seeking strategic superiority over the United States.

This warning is buttressed by Pentagon documents which measure the Soviet military growth by every available statistical standard. Both the State Department and the Central Intelligence Agency have added ominous overtones, citing intelligence reports that the Soviets are extending their reach and manipulating events around the world.

Yet the new president has shown no sense of alarm over the Big Picture. He has studied the grim reports and listened to the gloomy briefings with the air of a man who is unworried and unhurried. Sources close to Carter say his attitude is that the United States still is the most powerful nation on earth. Therefore, he will let the Russians do the stewing; he has more important economic and energy problems to worry about.

Of course, the president recognizes that the Soviet Union not only possesses an awesome striking force but is strengthening it by the day. The United States has a greater technical sophistication and stronger economic base, however, which makes it the No. 1 world power. He is also convinced from the available evidence that the United States would win a nuclear showdown.

Yet his real goal, as he declared in his inaugural address, is "the elimination of all nuclear weapons from this earth." As the first step, he has already called for an immediate halt to underground nuclear testing and a substantial reduction in nuclear weapons. He believes the Soviets can be sold on this, say our sources, if for no other reason than America has nuclear superiority. Moscow, therefore, has the most to gain from nuclear controls.

In the backrooms of Washington, meanwhile, the hawks and the doves are in full cry. They disagree vehemently over the Russian challenge. The military picture, therefore, is cloudy and the conclusions controversial. But here, essentially, is the view from the White House:

— No one disputes that Soviet power is growing. The Russian armed forces are out-spending, outstripping and out-modernizing the American forces. Yet overall, the United States still retains military dominance over the Soviet Union. It's the trends that are troubling. If the Russian growth rate and the American down trend continue, the United States will fall behind. Some Carter advisers argue, nevertheless, that America must lead the way to an agreement by disarming faster than Russia.

— The United States still has a three-to-one lead in ability to deliver nuclear warheads. Its weapons systems are more diversified and its technology is superior. U.S. technicians, for example, examined every bolt in the MIG-25 that a defector brought out of Russia last year. This is the most sophisticated plane in the Soviet Air Force. Yet they found it primitive by American standards.

— The Soviets have a huge manpower advantage. They can man their armed forces and defense factories at far less cost than the United States is able to do, with its higher salaries and retirement benefits. The Soviet Union also spends much less on the feeding and pampering of its troops. Most U.S. military personnel are engaged in providing services for one another.

— As an economic power, the Soviet Union lags far behind the United States. Confidential papers prepared for President Carter report that the Russians not only "felt the repercussions of the 1974-76 world recession but were hard hit by "poor harvests." This caused "the growth in exports to lag far behind the growth in imports."

In 1974, Russia wound up with a $911 million deficit. This jumped to a record $6.3 billion deficit in 1975. Although the 1976 figures aren't yet available, the confidential U.S. estimate is that the Soviets will run up "a total 1976 deficit of $4 to $6 billion."

Just in jest

The California State Assembly is a typical example of how government of the people, by the people and for the people operates. In fact, it is there that our duly elected representatives devote countless hours of study, research and debate in all-out efforts to properly serve their districts. Time is no object where the welfare of their constituents is concerned.

A classic example of this type of dedicated service was recently demonstrated when the State Assembly, after lengthy deliberation, voted that the titles Assemblymen and Assemblywomen should be changed to Assembly Members, and then, several days later after more time consuming arguments, voted to reconsider and go back to the original titles.

Just how many manhours and womanhours it took to enact this off-again-on-again bit of legislation we'll probably never know but, at present Assembly Members hourly rates, one can be certain it cost the taxpayers plenty. — And yet, as loyal American taxpayers, why complain? Look at all the democracy in action we're getting for our money.

Bureaucratic monstrosity

By EARL G. WATERS

C. Northcote Parkinson, the eminent scholar who gained world prominence with his "Parkinson's Law," an all too true tenet that explains the growth of bureaucracy with the observation that "work expands to fill the time available for completion," made another criticism of government which apparently is now being recognized by legislative analyst Alan Post and others.

"There is a proportionate size which goes with maximum efficiency and all our institutions tend to exceed it," Parkinson wrote. Pointing out that the eruption of rioting throughout the world has been the result of the belief that political and industrial bureaucracies are so great they seem beyond the power of the people to influence he says, "If this conclusion is wrong it is for our rulers to prove it by forming new organizations on a more human scale."

While scandals have been more the case than riots or demonstrations with California's massive Health-Welfare Agency, a consensus is developing that this gargantuan bureaucracy is unmanageable in its present form and should be dismantled.

Post, although not an architect of the 1972 reorganization plan which created the huge agency which employs more than 45,000 and eats up one-third of the total $15 billion state budget, concurred in its formation. He now says: "The consolidation has proven to be a substantial failure. Therefore we ought to admit our mistake and take corrective action."

In a most unbureaucratic manner, Mario Obledo announced support for the idea of decentralizing the agency he heads, stating "the consolidation has not worked very well." And, in obvious agreement, Senate Health Committee chairman Arlen Gregorio disclosed he has prepared a legislative package to break up at least one segment of the agency, the Health Department which administers more than 100 programs with 22,000 employes.

Incredibly, the agency came into being during the administration of Gov. Ronald Reagan. No one yet understands how Reagan who, in his own words, gave up acting "in an effort to make people aware of the danger to freedom in a vast permanent government structure so big and complex it virtually entraps presidents and legislators," could have acquiesced to the creation of such a bureaucratic monstrosity let alone advance it as his program.

Either he was distracted by dreams of the White House or his fears of being entrapped by big government were well founded. In any event the fact that he created by far the biggest governmental agency in state history is blithely ignored as he continues his speechmaking roundly condemning "big government."

Gregorio's plan would replace the present Health Department with a number of new departments, some under the names which they had before the consolidation and some with new and more elaborate titles. Welfare payments would be handled under a restored Social Welfare Department and most public health functions would be placed under a restored Public Health Department. New departments would emerge to manage health assistance payments and alcohol and drug abuse programs. These would be given pretentious names while a new department for senior citizen problems would be called simply the Department of Aging. Employment would be restored as the Department of Employment and housed, along with Rehabilitation and Industrial Relations in a new agency called the Labor Agency.

Whether Gregorio's plans are the complete solution or not his proposed break-up and reorganizations are in the right direction. The passing of time will permit judgment of the success of his plans which should be left flexible enough to allow further restructuring in the future.

Child's plea to parents

Dear Ann: Please — a rerun from 1966: "A Child's Plea to His Parents." I loved it then. My daughter needs it now. Many thanks. — Professor At Centre College, Ky.

Dear Centre: Here it is — with pleasure.

Give me more than food to nourish me. Give me the warmth and the security of your love. Give me plenty of things to look at, to feel, to smell, to listen to, to taste. And even some things to break.

Teach me to take my turn. Watch me play so you can see how I am trying to work out my problems.

When you tell me to do something, please tell me why I should do it.

Don't transfer your fears to me. I have enough of my own to cope with and I don't need more.

Help me not to act when I am angry. But don't make me so afraid of showing anger that I lose the capacity to feel strongly about anything.

Let me learn to bear pain, to want things but to be strong enough to postpone gratification of certain feelings I am not yet ready to experience.

Give me a little corner in the house that is all mine and nobody else's. I need moments of peace and quiet that cannot be invaded by anyone.

Give me my share of consideration and attention. I must know every day, even if for just a few moments, that I am the only one you are thinking about and loving. Let me ask any question that pops into my head. If you don't know the answer, say so. It's good training to hear someone say, "I don't know, but I will try to find out for you."

Be patient with me when I don't do things very well at first. Remember I have so many things to learn and almost everything takes some practice.

Let me bear the consequences for whatever I do. I need to be punished as well as rewarded. And when you punish me, make sure the punishment fits the crime.

Above all, grant me unconditional love. For if I know it is there, I will be able to give the same to my children — and they will be able to give it to theirs.

Dear Ann Landers: Last May I married a divorced man. A few weeks after our marriage he handed me the wedding ring his first wife had placed on his finger and said, "Do whatever you want with this. It has no meaning to me."

I put the ring in my jewelry box but whenever I see it I feel uncomfortable. It's 18-karat gold and must be worth something. I hate to just throw it in the garbage can. Any suggestions, Ann? — Need To Be Free

Dear Need: Take the ring to a jeweler who buys old gold. (Most of them do.) Donate the money to the Salvation Army. They do a fine job for a great many people.

Dear Ann: My 16-year-old friend just got her driver's license. Gloria drives lousy and I can't understand how she passed the test. She has no idea what the signals mean and I'm scared to ride with her.

Yesterday she turned into a one-way street and I thought it was curtains. Please tell me what to do without ruining our friendship. — Nervous In Nevada

Dear N.: Your life is more important than Gloria's friendship. Refuse to drive with her until she proves she has learned to handle an automobile. It would be an act of friendship.

Dr. Miller

Yanking it out best remedy

DEAR DR. MILLER: Hercules, my parrot, had a broken tail feather which bothered him. When I took him in to get it fixed, the cure was to yank the base of the feather right out of the tail. As you can imagine, Hercules was very indignant. I was too. Wasn't that being unnecessarily cruel? — M.R.

DEAR M.R.: Understandably, Herk's had it with the quick cure for a broken tail feather. Actually, though, the technique was appropriate. A fractured feather can cause severe hemorrhage, as well as being a nuisance. The most effective way to solve the problem completely is to remove the base of the feather which not only relieves the irritation (once the momentary effect has passed), but also allows a new feather to grow in its place. (Anesthesia prior to the "big yank" would, unfortunately, be impractical and even potentially hazardous.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: I always make sure my dogs are getting shots for hepatitis when they get their distemper shots because I once lost a dog with hepatitis. A friend is keeping a fox for a while, and I'm wondering if they don't get hepatitis the same as dogs do. — R.E.

DEAR R.E.: The virus causing infectious canine hepatitis in dogs causes diseases in wild related species also. In the fox, this infectious hepatitis virus is the cause of fox encephalitis. Death in the affected animals is due to blood vessel and organ damage, the brain suffering the most severe changes.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Recently my guinea pigs have developed white flecks behind their ears. These flecks may be alive — they move. Do you think they caught them from roaming in the same corridor where the house mouse goes? Is it likely to be uncomfortable to them? Can I get it? I've hung garlic cloves around their home in hopes this might deter the pests. — K.R.

DEAR K.R.: If those flecks were moving under their own power, then odds are excellent they are alive and, presumably, pesty. I can't say where the guinea pigs caught the critters and don't even know what they are. Possibly, though, the house mouse may have been a contributor. I hope you haven't been depending on the garlic cloves to handle the situation. It's highly doubtful it would do any good. (Garlic's highly overrated as an internal pest deterrent, also). If the problem hasn't been solved yet, a local veterinarian could help you determine the best course of action, and probably also let you know whether or not the condition is contagious to humans. I presume, though, you'd know by now, if it were . . .

Smokers vs. non-smokers

I witnessed a wedding last summer that focused attention on a real problem: smokers vs. non-smokers.

The smokers (seated at the left of the altar) and the non-smokers (seated at the right of the altar) heard the minister ask, "Do you, Debbie, promise to love and cherish from this day forward, for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health, so long as Richard inhales?" She took a deep breath and answered, "I will."

It made you wonder. Could a militant non-smoker, wearing a Thank You For Not Smoking headband with a veil attached, find happiness with a man with a brown stain on his index finger? Only time would tell.

Last week, I ran into Debbie. She jumped up, clicked her heels in mid-air and said, "I quit! It's a matter of life and breath."

"I know that, Debbie," I smiled. "So, how is Richard?"

"Who knows?" she sighed. "The only time I see him is on elevators and in doctor's offices where all smoking is prohibited. Everyplace else has smoking and non-smoking areas and we are split up."

"Is that any kind of life for two young people who are just married?"

"We knew there would be hardships. When we went on a vacation last year, I saw him on the plane briefly when he went to use the restroom. Sometimes, if the smoke isn't too thick, I wave to him in restaurants where I'm seated across the room."

"Are you saying you are never together?"

"That's right. When we go to a movie, he sits in the smoking section and I sit in the non-smoking section. We never talk in the lobby of a theatre anymore. I can't stand the smoke. Since he's in a smoker's car pool, I ride to work with a non-smoker's group. We used to go to the grocery together, but now he has to stay outside if he wants to light up. Our entire house is sectioned off into smoking and non-smoking areas."

"The problem is going to get worse," I said. "More and more, our society is being asked to make a choice between smoking and non-smoking."

"I know," sighed Debbie. "I don't know what we'll do when the baby comes. I'd like Richard to see it, but the hospital is definitely for non-smokers."

"The baby!" I gasped. "How did you ever get pregnant in the first place?"

She shrugged. "I've narrowed it down to the doctor's office and elevators."

Dr. Lamb

Shaving won't change hair

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can a woman shave her face like a man does or will shaving make her facial hair dark and bristly like a man's whiskers?

I read that it is beneficial to the skin to shave with a blade because it removes dead skin and extraneous material. But what are the after effects of shaving for a woman?

I've tried lotions and creams for facial hair removal, but my skin breaks out terribly. Please help me. I have so much hair on my face.

DEAR READER — Shaving does not make hair any more coarse. The base of the hair is stiffer. When it is cut short, as with shaving, the base is like the stiff stubble of freshly cut coarse grass. A beard feels softer only because you feel the softer full length of the hair. As an example, a close very short crew-cut will make the hair on the scalp seem stiff, but the base of the hair is no stiffer than it was before the hair was cut.

A man's whiskers are stiff in part because they are the base of the hair for his beard.

A woman has just as much hair on her face as a man. Ordinarily the hair is so fine that it cannot be seen readily. These soft, fine hairs give the impression that a woman does not have facial hair. In some women the hair is coarser and may be darker. These coarser hairs are then noticeable. Cutting these hairs will leave the short stiff base of them and whether or not they will be like a man's whiskers at evening time — the so-called five o'clock shadow — depends entirely on how coarse the hairs are in the first place, not on the shaving itself.

Shaving the skin does effectively remove oils and surface accumulation of excess cells. In people with oily faces this might be beneficial but you can accomplish about as much with good soap and a washcloth.

You should see a dermatologist. There are things that can be done for too much facial hair. In a few instances it is from hormonal influences that can be treated. A woman who is low on estrogen may develop finer, less noticeable hair with adequate hormone treatment. I hasten to add that in many cases the hormones are completely normal and additional hormones do not help at all.

In other instances electrolysis done under knowledgeable hands is very helpful. To determine what is best in any one case it is better to have a recommendation from a dermatologist who has seen your face.

I'm not sure what you mean by your skin breaking out after you have used lotions and creams to remove hair. This could be a chemical reaction to the products you used. Or if the products are greasy you could be describing acne problems. Anyone who has acne problems should avoid all creams and lotions that contain any oils or fats. The problem is related to an excess production of skin oils to begin with.

Acne problems can be treated successfully in most cases. I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can Be Treated. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292. If there is a hormonal imbalance you could be more susceptible to having both increased facial hair and increased oiliness of your skin leading to acne.

Ted, Waldy show 'em how

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

In Monday's article we mentioned that Ted Lightner and Waldemar von Zedtwitz were two of the three players who invented the forcing two-bid. Today they are in their 80s and, while they don't play much bridge, they still do mighty well when they come to the table.

They bid today's hand about forty years ago, but their bidding may well serve as a model today.

There was nothing wrong with Ted's two bid and when Waldy gave him an immediate raise Ted decided to explore for the slam. Hence his rebid to four diamonds.

Waldy looked at his two kings. A lesser player might say to himself, "I have a minimum positive response. I should sign off at four spades."

Not Waldy. He realized that his king and one diamond had to be worth their weight in gold, and bid five diamonds to show second round control.

Ted continued his exploration with the five-heart cue bid and at this point Waldy realized that Ted could not be trying for a slam if he had two club losers. His four trumps looked mighty good and he jumped to six spades.

Now Ted bid seven, since he felt certain that Waldy would show up with just what he did hold and that it would be possible to discard any losing hearts in Waldy's hand on the long diamonds.

Ask the Jacobys

A New York reader wants to know if expert players use the aces over two-bids convention.

The answer is they don't. Once in a blue moon you may find a hand that suits this convention, but those hands don't come up often enough to make the convention of any real value.

BRIDES

"You spoke of inexperienced brides who prefer to browse in supermarkets rather than shop in small grocery stores, because they don't want to be embarrassed by having to ask clerks naive questions. Don't I know it! Forty-four years ago, as a bride, I was eager to make a good impression on my husband, who was a New York City restaurant manager. So I asked the clerk in the small grocery store to suggest the evening meal. I took it home, cooked it as recommended, and when I told my husband what it was, he almost fell out of his chair, laughing. The clerk without even a smile had called it 'a milk-fed mackerel'." Counseling Corner

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and family counselor

One of a child's needs is to find a "special" place in the family. John was an only child who for four years received lots of attention because he was cute and could say funny things. When his little brother, Charles, was born much of the attention was given to him. John's special place in the family was being threatened. Being cute and saying funny things stopped working to get him the attention he needed.

It did not take him long to learn that he could have another kind of "special" place in the family by being mean and rude to his little brother. This got his parents very upset. They again focused their attention on John but this time the attention was negative. "What's the matter with you! Don't you know better than that? You are mean and nasty," they would say.

John was caught in a trap. If he stopped being mean and rude he would lose both the attention he needed and his new "special" place in the family. Being the "mean and rude one" isn't as good as being the "cute and funny one," but it sure beats being the "ignored one." If John continues being mean and rude, he loses — but at least he gets attention. If he stops his negative behavior and is ignored again, he feels worse.

John chose to continue being mean and rude not only at home but also at nursery school. A pattern was being set which, if it continued, could lead John into lots of trouble the rest of his life.

Fortunately, John's parents realized this in time and started spending "quality" time with him all by himself. His mother took time out from the baby to read him a story and to play. Dad came home and played with him on the floor. These actions helped John feel special. He did not have to be mean and nasty to get this attention and love. His bad behavior soon stopped and his family functioned much better. John felt good.

To many this solution may seem too simplistic. That may be true. But the fact of the matter is that when we resort to complex solutions, these are often far worse than the original problems. Frequently small changes in our behavior as parents can create an environment in which our children feel loved, cared for, special.

John is a lot like many children. The way in which he sought proof of his acceptance is through finding a special place in the family. Unless these quests for acceptance are confirmed, he will lose confidence in himself and may engage in inappropriate acting out behavior. The threat of being ignored or rejected by others is perhaps the greatest fear any child can experience. It is not the "quantity" of time we spend with children that is so important — it is the "quality" of that time we spend that really counts.

Expansion starts on Pomona gallery

Construction of a new exhibit gallery and minor revisions to existing gallery space have begun at the Gladys K. Montgomery Art Center at Pomona College.

According to David W. Steadman, director of the Claremont Colleges Galleries, the new 2,500-square-foot facility will become the main exhibit area in the center and will double the total exhibition space. It will feature ceiling-hung movable display panels and a humidity control system. Steadman said the addition will allow the art department to present more student and faculty exhibitions than has been possible in the past.

Located in what has been an open courtyard, the gallery's north corner will contain an information and reception area in a concrete cylinder designed to be compatible with the existing buildings. A new walk will connect Carolyn Bartel Lyon Garden to College Avenue. Provision will also be made for easy access to the new gallery for handicapped persons. The remodelling project will include converting an existing small gallery into a print and study room.

Cost of the new construction has been funded by a gift from Mrs. Montgomery, donor of the original center built in 1958 and of an addition completed in 1968. Mrs. Montgomery, an honorary trustee of Pomona College and recipient of an honorary doctorate in fine arts in 1970, was founder and first president of the Women's Campus Club. She has long been active in the affairs of Pomona and her many gifts have included the Thatcher Music Building library in memory of her husband, the late Victor Montgomery, a prominent Los Angeles insurance executive.

Architects for the $357,000 project are Powell, Morgridge, Richards & Coghlan, Los Angeles, who also designed the original art center and later additions. The building contractor is Noyes, Roach Co., Los Angeles.

Montgomery will remain closed until mid-September; when it reopens a showing of 20th Century drawings and watercolors from private Los Angeles collections will be presented. The exhibit, being organized by Steadman and Frederick S. Wight, director emeritus of the UCLA gallery, will be shown in San Francisco later.

Montgomery's permanent collection has been moved to the Lang Gallery, Scripps College, for the duration of the construction period.

Art exhibition set at Citrus

Art in fiber by Simone Gad and illusionistic-realistic sculpture by Lukman Glasgow make up the exhibit, "Fantasy, Soft and Hard," opening Monday at the Citrus College art gallery.

Critic Sabato Fiorello has said of Gad, "Simone is inseparable from her work. Both are charming, inventive and always a delight to behold. Her mind is fantastic and her dedication to her craft is wonderful."

Gad's work is collected by artists in other fields such as Elton John, Diana Ross and Cher. Displays of her work have been included at the county Museum of Art, the Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New York City and the Lee Nordness Gallery, New York.

It has been said that Glasgow's work "continues to deliver surrealist entertainment full of wit, puns and eroticism."

Much of his earlier work follows the ancient pottery form of kernos, a hollow ring vessel used for holding liquids, dating from the 9th-8th Century B.C. Some of the historic kernos took the form of a bird with a long spout from which liquid was poured. Glasgow has recreated the classic character of the kernos in many handsome variations with a focus on the images of hands, such as his sculpture, "The Meaning of Language."

His latest accomplishments in the realm of illusionistic-realism are defined by even more contemporary ceramic sculpture. Through his initial impetus, the latest showing of work by the nation's leading artists of illusionistic-realism has been exhibited at the Laguna Beach Museum of Art.

The Citrus College exhibit will commence with an artist's reception open to the public Monday from 6 p.m.-9 p.m. The gallery is open Monday-Thursday, 11 a.m.-4 p.m.; Tuesday, 6 p.m.-9 p.m.; Friday, 11 a.m.-2 p.m., and Sunday, 1 p.m.-4 p.m.

Music pupils schedule tour

Area music students are sharpening their skills in preparation for the Young California Musicians Abroad concert tour of Scandinavia in June and July.

The 60 musicians will present eight concerts in four Scandinavian countries — Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland. The tour will be highlighted by a request performance on July 4 at the American Embassy in Copenhagen, Denmark.

"We are especially encouraged by the talent of those students who have auditioned and have been accepted," said Wyatt.

Musicians between 15 and 19 years of age are eligible for Y.C.M.A.

Redlands sets music auditions

Young musicians are invited to apply for auditions for the 26th annual contest of the Redlands Community Music Association to be held at Watchorn Hall, University of Redlands, on April 24.

There are three categories in two divisions; piano, voice and instrumental, junior and senior.

Eligibility requirements are: junior instrumentalists must be 15 through 18 years of age; voice contestants, 15 through 20. Senior instrumentalists must be 19 through 26, while voice contenders may be 21 through 26. Pianists are included with other instrumentalists in age requirements.

Auditions are open to musicians who live in San Bernardino and Riverside counties, and the Pomona-Claremont area of Los Angeles County, or to students who attend schools or colleges in those areas.

Application blanks can be obtained by sending a stamped, addressed envelope to Mrs. Raymond Beeler, Chairman of Young Artists' Auditions, Redlands Community Music Association, Box 466, Redlands 92373.

Melinda Dillon plays two parts in movie

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — If you've seen "Bound for Glory," Hal Ashby's brilliant film about Woody Guthrie, you may not have realized it contains one unique feature.

Melinda Dillon plays two roles in the film. You'd never know it by looking at the two characters she plays — they look entirely different — and you'd have to have quick eyes to catch the repetition of her name in the cast list. But it's there.

MARY GUTHRIE — Melinda Dillon, it reads. And then, way down the cast, there is another notation:

MEMPHIS SUE — Melinda Dillon.

This just isn't done in Hollywood. And the reason it was done in this case is, Melinda Dillon says, because Hal Ashby felt sorry for her.

She had played the role of Mary Guthrie, the wife of Woody, who is acted so well by David Carradine. And she finished it. It had been a pleasant experience, she says, and, when her work was done, she was left with an empty feeling — something which can probably be called the post-part blues.

"The last day on the set," Melinda says, "I just cried and cried. It was so sad, leaving everybody."

MELINDA DILLON

A few days later, Hal Ashby, the director, called her and asked her if she'd be interested in playing the part of Memphis Sue.

She jumped at the opportunity. They made her up to look as little like her real self as possible. For Memphis Sue, she wore a dark wig, a lot of make-up and a bunch of padding. And, unless you know, you wouldn't know.

"Bound for Glory" has totally changed Melinda Dillon's life. She had come out from New York to play Mary Guthrie, and it was supposed to be a two-week thing.

With that out of the way, she went into Steven Spielberg's new film about UFOs, "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." It is a film that is close to her, because she's a believer in UFOs.

"I think the thing that ultimately convinced me," she says, "was an experience my parents had. They are very skeptical people. They live in Kansas, on flat, flat land.

"One night, they saw this huge triangular shaped object in the sky. It had blinking lights. It just stayed there, and an hour passed. My folks saw jets flying beneath it, showing how high up it was. Lots of other people saw it, too.

"And I've seen something strange, myself. Once I was recuperating from a back operation — it hurt so badly I couldn't get out of bed — and one night I woke up and there was this brilliant orange light in the sky.

"I got up — and there was absolutely no pain from my back — and stood there, looking at the light. When it disappeared, my back pain returned. Isn't that odd?"

Yes.

Joyce Brothers

Matter of concern

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: My son has lived with almost a dozen women trying, he says, to find one to marry. He and his women believe this is the only route to the perfect marriage. I disagree. Of course, that doesn't matter, at least in their eyes. Practice makes perfect may apply to a lot of things, but I'm just old-fashioned enough to believe that sex is not one of them. — J.O.

DEAR J.O.: The latest statistics on this subject seem to agree with your views rather than your son's. Nancy Moore Clatworthy, an associate professor of sociology at Ohio State University, interviewed 100 couples in 1975. Her findings do not support the hypothesis that a period of living together before marriage aids the couple in adjusting to marriage or helps the individuals select a compatible mate. On the contrary, she said, those couples who had not lived together before marriage were just a little happier and more successful. There were fewer divorces. While the differences were not great, those who hadn't lived together rated higher on all scales and were more involved and happier.

Since your son his lived with a dozen women, I suspect that he really doesn't want to marry and isn't looking for any continuity in his relationships. He may be afraid of real emotional closeness and may be unable to make any mature commitment. He may be looking for a perfection that he'll never find.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: Some weeks ago, a man broke into our apartment and raped me and then my roommate at knife point. She immediately reported it to the police and wanted me to give as much information as I could so the man might be apprehended, but I was so shocked that I couldn't move or speak. It was two weeks before I could be helpful. I feel so guilty. If I hadn't been so frightened I might even have prevented him from committing the act against my friend. I just froze. I'm so ashamed of this. What should I have done? And how can I avoid being overcome by fear again? — P.D.

DEAR P.D.: What you describe is neither abnormal nor unusual in a painful and shocking experience. Animals often freeze in fear. It is a primitive survival technique. When humans become immobile and lose their power to speak under conditions of shock it is called "waxy flexibility." Sometimes this short-circuits the response of the predator.

It's important for you to realize that your reaction has nothing to do with weakness or strength. All normal individuals experience fear but they respond in different ways. Since people are so complex, there's really no way of predicting what your behavior might be at another time, but it's very possible it would be different in another situation.

Don't feel guilty or ashamed.

Camp Fire candy sale continues

Camp Fire Girls in Mt. San Antonio Council are busier than ever promoting the sale of their high quality candy and nuts as they swing into the middle stretch of the annual candy sale. Each young salesperson is attempting to reach a goal she has set for herself.

Many girls are trying to earn their way to summer resident camp — others have set their sights on a 10-speed bike, or a sales trophy. Whatever their private hopes, they know community support of the sale will also provide funding for valuable Camp Fire program and maintenance of activities.

Persons wishing to purchase candy may telephone the local Camp Fire office, 714-624-5076 for prompt delivery.

Bruins victorious, 72-59

Progress Bulletin
Sports
Pomona, California ■ Sunday, February 6, 1977

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The inside was all clogged up with those big guys," UCLA Coach Gene Bartow said following the Bruins' 72-59 victory over Washington State Saturday. "We'd have been fighting for our lives on a bad shooting day."

Although UCLA had trouble against the Cougars inside, Bruin guards Roy Hamilton and Jim Spillane were deadly from outside, scoring 18 and 14 points. Forward David Greenwood also had 18 for the Bruins.

"Hamilton and Spillane shot awfully well," Bartow said as his Bruins kept the Pacific-8 lead with a 6-1 record.

"We tried to get the ball inside, but we couldn't do it."

"Our over-all game is coming together," said Hamilton, "and we need all five guys. Washington State was concentrating on stopping Marques (Johnson) and David inside, so that allowed us to shoot from outside."

The triumph ran the Bruins' record to 18-2, while Washington State is now 15-5.

The high-scoring game by Greenwood and the two UCLA guards made up for a poor shooting effort by forward Marques Johnson.

Johnson, who has been scoring well over 20 points a game recently for the Bruins, was held to 10 points as he hit but three of 12 shots from the field.

The Cougars, whose Pac-8 record is now 4-3, were led by guard Harold Rhodes with 26 points, tops in the game.

Washington State, however, missed its star center, Steve Puidokas, who remained in Pullman with a sprained ankle. His replacement, sophomore James Donaldson, scored 11 points.

The Bruins led all the way.

Washington State cut UCLA's lead to six at 45-39 midway through the second half, but the Bruins reeled off a 10-1 scoring burst and were never really threatened again.

UCLA was in control of the regionally televised contest from the start, racing out to a 27-17 lead with 15 minutes played and going on to hold a 35-23 advantage at the intermission.

Washington State was hurt by a poor 35 per cent shooting average from the field in the opening half, while the Bruins, with Hamilton and Spillane connecting from outside, hit 54 per cent.

Johnson failed to connect on six shots from the field, and ended up scoring just three points in the half.

Rhodes led the Cougars in the opening half with 10 points.

Broncó women win, 82-68

UCR knocks out Poly

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

All year long, Cal Poly Pomona basketball coach Don Hogan has been talking about his team's great potential.

Well, if the Broncos ever realize their coach's predictions, it won't be this season.

Poly has a very talented team on paper and most observers rate the Broncos as a top contender in the CCAA race but it doesn't help much when a club can't shoot.

The Broncs were as cold as the icy midwest Saturday night in a stunning lackluster 71-55 loss to UC Riverside which ended any hopes of a CCAA title this year.

With a 2-4 league record, it's highly unlikely Poly could catch first-place Cal Poly San Luis Obispo (4-1) even by sweeping the final four.

The shooting statistics tell the story.

Poly attempted 23 more shots than UCR but made seven less. Riverside shot 62.2 per cent (28-of-45) while Poly could hit on only 30.9 per cent (21-68).

For some reason, the Broncs have had trouble all season putting the ball into the hoop and that is what the game is all about.

At least one Cal Poly team is playing good basketball. The women bounced back from Friday's loss to Long Beach State to beat San Diego State, 82-68, in the first game Saturday to run their record to 15-3.

The women will create most of the excitement for the rest of the basketball season. Coach Darlene May's team will entertain UCLA next Saturday and will host the small college national finals in March.

Linda Scheenstra, a senior from Chaffey High, led the Bronco women with 13 points while Mary Reichert added 12 points and 14 rebounds. The women also gave the men a lesson in making free throws in sinking 22 of 28.

Center Don Johnson was the Broncos' entire offense in the men's game as the 6-foot-11 sophomore center from Chicago scored 19 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Guard Clyde Robinson led the Highlanders with 17 points followed by Rennie Watts with 11.

"Right now, our problem is our state of mind," explained Hogan. "The potential is still there. You can't discount it. When the ball doesn't go in, you look medicore. We have lost confidence in our shooting and we're not taking the good shots. It just compounds itself."

Trojans finally triumph

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It's hard to measure if there was a psychological thing hanging over our heads," Southern Cal Coach Bob Boyd said Saturday after his Trojans had won their first Pacific-8 game since March 1, 1975. "But if there was, this should remove it."

USC, led by Marv Sefford's 25 points and Greg White's 23, had just downed Washington 83-70.

"I feel elated," said the grinning Boyd. "Our team is just playing well. I told the players before this game that I thought for all the adversity we'd had in losing, they had maintained their composure and itensity very well.

"I'm very proud of these kids...and I would have told you that if we had lost."

Boyd said that, although the Trojans appeared to have the game well in hand in the latter stages of the contest, he was hardly relaxed.

"I know one thing, we've had a lot of leads and lost and when we were 10 ahead with about three minutes to go, I was still very worried."

Southern Cal, now 1-5 in Pac8 play and 5-13 overall, had trailed 34-30 at halftime, but the Trojans exploded for 53 points in the second half.

The Trojans tied the score at 52 with 11:11 remaining in the game on White's 20-foot jump shot. After Husky Coach Marv Harshman called a time out to try to halt Sothern Cal's momentum, White scored again to put USC ahead for keeps.

Washington center James Edwards scored 24 points in the loss, which dropped the Huskies to 4-3 in Pac-8 play and 13-6 overall.

Safford, a guard, hit 10 of 17 of the floor, and White, a forward, was 10 of 16. White also led USC in rebounds with eight.

Forward Paul Henderson chipped in 19 points for the Trojans.

USC jumped out to an early 9-4 lead, but the Huskies came back to tie it at 14, and the score changed hands for most of the rest of the first half.

However, Washington, with Edwards doing most of the damage, edged out to a four-point lead at the intermission.

Early in the second half, the Huskies ran off an 8-0 scoring spurt to take a 46-42 lead. But the Trojans finally caught them again at 52 enroute to their first conference victory in almost two years.

Mountie cagers upset Santa Ana

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

Mt. San Antonio College won its third consecutive South Coast Conference game Saturday night at Santa Ana.

The Mounties 81-75 upset victory over the Dons rekindles MSAC's SCC title hopes. The victory which avenged an early drubbing at the hands of Santa Ana, gives MSAC a conference record of 3-4.

The difference Saturday night was the ferocious boardplay turned in by the Mounties as they out-rebounded the Dons, 57-38. Three Mounties grabbed 10 or more rebounds as MSAC refused to let Santa Ana dominate the boards as they had in last month's contest at MSAC.

John Deck grabbed a season high total of 17 rebounds which was four more than the high of 13 he achieved at San Diego Mesa. Earner Mays added 11 and John Gagne came off the bench to pull down 10 caroms.

"It was a great win!" remarked a jubliant Gene Victor after the Mounties had beaten what he thought was one of the greatest teams Santa Ana has ever had.

"It was a terrific win for us," added a grinning Victor. "Earlier in the year they caught us with a lot of guys hurt. The first three teams we played caught us just right as we weren't ready to play physically or mentally."

MSAC quickly jumped out to a 14-6 lead over the Dons which the Mounties didn't relinquished until Santa Ana's Sylvester Pritchett canned a 20 footer at the 13:13 mark of the second half. That put Santa Ana ahead for the first in the game at 46-45.

But the Mounties refused to fold as the Santa Ana defense tried to knock the ball out of the MSAC hands with a rough-house style of defense. It didn't work as MSAC traded baskets with the Dons before retrieving its lead at 52-50. The Mounties quickly raised its lead to seven at 61-54 before hanging on for a six-point victory.

Victor commented, "I thought we played hard both offensively and defensively tonight."

MSAC was able to sucessfully stopped Santa Ana's potent fast-break style of play as the Mounties forced the Dons into a set offense most of the evening. The Dons connected on only 27 of 75 shots as they were limited to very few fastbreak opportunties. Santa Ana hit 36 percent to MSAC's 37 percent in the fast moving, rough and tumble, foul ridden contest.

A total of 48 fouls were called as three players fouled out in the contest.

MSAC's offense was given a boost at the charity stripe where the Mounties converted 25 of 35 foul shots. Santa Ana made 17 of 23.

Deck was the man of the hour for the Mounties as he scored 16 points. Eight of his 16 points came on offensive rebounds. Robert Vigil and Mays were the top MSAC scorers with 18 apiece. Dick Rockwood added 10. Seven of his points were crucial 1-1 foul attempts late in the second half of action.

Santa Ana was paced by Steve Smith with 27 and Pritchett with 21. The Dons' top boardman was center Dave Nelson with 16.

MSAC returns to SCC action Wednesday night at Grossmont.

Owens will lead the laughs at the dinner as the writers salute the Dodgers and Angels. He will head up an all-comedy dais with top comedians joining in to offer a humorous look at baseball in the manner of a Hollywood 'roast'.

Proceeds of the dinner will be to the writers' charity projects.

Tickets at $25 each are available through the baseball writers' headquarters, Suite 1352, Biltmore Hotel, Los Angeles 90013, or by calling (213) 626-7678.

Girl cager has 82-point game

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — When Daina Supstiks scored 63 points in a basketball game last weekend, she thought she had hit her peak. Not so.

Miss Supstiks, a 5-foot-10 senior at Hoover High School, drilled in 82 points Friday night to lead Hoover to a 100-92 victory over Roosevelt High.

"Oh, I can't believe it," she said when told of her point total, which set a Metropolitan Conference mark. "I never thought I'd exceed last week's points—63 against North."

Kings, Habs fight to tie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Defenseman Guy Lapointe scored a fluke goal off a Los Angeles defender 4:28 into the final period to help Montreal rally for a 3-3 National Hockey League tie with the Kings Saturday night.

Lapointe's 16th goal deflected past Kings goalie Rogie Vachon after the Canadiens' defenseman fired from in close. The tie enabled Montreal to remain unbeaten in its last nine matches, and to stretch its unbeaten string against the Kings to five this season.

The deadlock dropped the third-place Kings eight points behind second-place Pittsburgh in the NHL Norris Division race.

Only brilliant goaltending by Vachon prevented the Canadiens from scoring more often, as Montreal fired 27 shots at the Kings goalie in the second period, the most by a Los Angeles opponent this year.

The Kings had enjoyed a 3-1 advantage eight seconds into the second period, but the Canadiens stormed back to take the play away.

Guy Lafleur opened the scoring after only 1:25 of the first period with his 39th goal of the season to beef up his NHL scoring lead.

Mike Murphy's 21st goal after eight seconds of the second period stretched the Los Angeles advantage to 3-1. But Jacques Lemaire narrowed the margin to one goal at 8:04 of the period. Lemaire scored while on his back, as he swiped at the disc and knocked it into the net.

Top-ranked USF stays unbeaten

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Marlon Redmond destroyed Nevada-Reno with 18 points in the first half Saturday night, propelling the top-ranked University of San Francisco Dons to a 98-81 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball victory.

Redmond finished with 27 points and teammate Winford Boynes added 22, including 14 in the second half, in the victory which made USF 23-0. The Dons virtually locked up the WCAC race, making their record 8-0, compared to second-place Nevada-Reno's 4-3.

Joey Schmidt led Nevada's scorers with 23 points, but 16 of them were in the second half when the Wolf Pack never was within 10 points of San Francisco.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Mike Phillips and Larry Johnson sparked an awesome Kentucky attack late in the first half Saturday night to send the No. 3 ranked Wildcats to a 113-73 Southeastern Conference victory over Vanderbilt.

While Kentucky scored 24 points in the last seven minutes before intermission, its zone defense shut off the Commodores, allowing only six points, all of them on free throws.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Rod Griffin triggered two scoring bursts in the second half Saturday night that rallied Wake Forest's fifth-ranked Deacons to an 80-72 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Virginia's Cavaliers.

The Deacons, down 44-39 at halftime and still trailing 54-51 with 12 minutes left, ran off eight straight points to take the lead for good.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Senior guard T.R. Dunn scored eight points in overtime as eighth-ranked Alabama beat Louisiana State 77-70 in Southeastern Conference basketball Saturday night.

LSU controlled the game's tempo and led through most of the contest. The Tigers were ahead 44-31 at halftime.

Alabama came to within two points several times in the second half before tying it 66-66 on a tip-in by Reginald King with 4:10 left.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Robert Smith, who scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half, hit a jump shot with 10 seconds remaining to lift Nevada-Las Vegas to an 89-88 victory over Rutgers in college basketball thriller Saturday.

The lead changed hands four times in the last two minutes before Smith's basket ended it. The victory before 7,506 in the Spectrum was the 18th against two losses for the fourth-ranked Rebels.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — John Robinson and Rickey Green combined for 43 points Saturday and led first-place Michigan to a 93-72 Big Ten basketball rout of Ohio State.

Forward Robinson scored 22 points, his high for the season, and star guard Green added 21 as the seventh-ranked Wolverines raised their conference record to 10-1 and over-all mark to 17-2.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Ninth-ranked Louisville exploded to a 31-8 lead in the first 10 minutes behind guard Rick Wilson and went on to rout Memphis State 111-92 in a Metro-7 Conference basketball game Saturday.

Controlling the boards and fast-breaking at every opportunity, Louisville put four players in double figures in the first half alone en route to its 13th consecutive victory. The Cardinals are 16-2.

Davila signs for Forum bout

INGLEWOOD — Pomona's Alberto Davila, the eight-ranking bantamweight in the world, has been signed to box on the Pipino Cuevas-Miguel Campanino welterweight title card at The Forum on Saturday, Feb. 26.

Davila, who has won five of his last six bouts, will test young Salvador Sanchez of Mexico City, in a 10-rounder.

Last year, the 22-year-old Pomona boxer upset top-rated Lupe Pintor of Mexico at The Forum.

Tickets are now on sale for the Cuevas-Campanino program, which has a 7 p.m. starting time, at $30, $20, $15 and $10.

Mild upset at Santa Anita

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Jockey Don Pierce kept Hail Hilarious just off the pace set by My Juliet for most of the race, then urged his mount to the front in the homestretch for a mild upset in the $58,550 Santa Maria Handicap at Santa Anita Saturday.

The triumph, with Hail Hilarious edging fast-closing Swingtime by a head, capped a riding triple for Pierce, his second of the week. He opened the afternoon's card with a $20.20 victory on Eagle in Flight, then came back aboard $5.40 victor Countess Fager in the fourth race.

Hail Hilarious, a 4-year-old by Fast Hilarious, covered the 1 1/16th miles in 1:42 in besting a field of nine in the event or older fillies and mares.

The winner, who carried 122 pounds, returned $9.40, $5.40 and $3. Swingtime, 120, ridden by Bill Shoemaker, was part of a Charlie Whittingham-trained entry with Vagabonda and paid $6.60 and $3.20. The show payoff on the favored Bastonera II was $2.40. Bastonera II, highweighted at 126, was ridden by Angel Cordero and finished four lengths back of the leaders.

My Juliet, ridden by Tony Black, faded to fifth.

Stags defeat 'Hens, 70-63

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

Claremont-Mudd built up a big first-half lead and then rode out a Pomona-Pitzer comeback to defeat the Sagehens, 70-63, at Pomona's Memorial Gym Saturday night.

The Stags came out red hot. They hit on seven of their first eight shots and raced to a 14-1 lead.

Their aggressive defense gave the Sagehens all kinds of trouble forcing them into missed shots and turnovers. The game was 2:45 old before the 'Hens got their first point.

Nearly seven minutes passed (6:57) before Tom Fink scored the first Pomona-Pitzer field goal.

In building up a 41-25 halftime lead, Claremont-Mudd connected on 16 of 28 field goal attempts to 12 of 34 by Pomona-Pitzer.

After the intermission the Stags picked up where they left off and made four of their first five shots and the lead stretched to 19 points.

But the momentum changed after Pomona-Pitzer took a time out with 17:39 left and Les Nagler sent his troops back out playing a full-court, man-to-man defense.

While the Stags missed nine straight shots and went over four minutes at one stretch without scoring, the Sagehens pecked away.

Three times the 'Hens drew within six points only to have Johnny Daniel or Bob Smith or Mark Sunderland or Dan Butterfield pop one in for the Stags.

Daniel, the 5-6 guard, led all scorers with 16 points in a reserve role. Smith scored 13, Butterfield 14 and Sunderland eight.

"This team has so distinctly changed from last year and the beginning of this season, I really don't know what to say," said C-M coach Dave Wells. "It plays with great intensity. I'm just very, very pleased.

"They never lost their poise tonight. Pomona came back But our players regrouped, held on to the ball and hit some shots when they had to.

"If I had to pick one thing that stands out, it is the defense. It was super tonight and that first half with the way we shot was the best we've played."

The Stags cooled off a little (13 of 28) in the second half. But they were still over 50 percent for the night hitting on 29 of 56 shots.

After making only 12 of 34 in the first half, Pomona-Pitzer came back to hit on 12 of 21 in the second. The Sagehens outscored the Stags at the free throw line with 15 of 21 as compared to 12 of 18 for the Stags.

"I don't know what it is. No matter where we play, or what we do, the score is always about the same," remarked Nagler.

In defeating the Sagehens three times in a season for the first time, the Stags scored 70 points each time. The 'Hens had 62 and 60 in the first two.

"You have to credit their defense," Nagler continued. "They had their hands in our guys faces all the time. We came back, but we got too far behind to begin with."

C-M, now 10-10 overall (after picking up a forfeit win from Southern California College) and 4-3 in the SCIAC, travel to Whittier (7-0) Wednesday night.

Pomona-Pitzer, 5-14 and 2-5 in the conference, hosts Occidental (6-1) Wednesday.

Trojans come alive

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Lutheran High, after trailing by as much as seven points in the third quarter, came alive in the final period to beat Webb, 50-44, Saturday night at Damien High.

The visiting Gauls took a 37-33 lead into the fourth quarter but two quick baskets by Lutheran's Bob Swick, both after offensive rebounds, tied the score at 37 with 6:50 to play.

Following a Webb turnover, one of five in the final period, Ed Harness' basket gave the Trojans a 39-37 lead with 6:22 remaining and Webb never caught up.

The Gauls were still in the game with just over three minutes to play when center Kerry Tims pulled Webb to within two points, 43-41. But baskets by Lutheran's Gregg Guenther and Dwight Teel put the game away for the Trojans.

Lutheran wound up outscoring the Gauls 17-7 through the final eight minutes.

"Our kids finally decided they didn't want to lose," said Trojan coach John Rode. "When they started hustling, we pulled ahead."

Lutheran, 6-8 in Arrowhead League play and 10-11 on the season, had already defeated Webb twice this year by wide margins: 63-32 and 64-40. Webb is still winless after 17 contests.

Swick, a 6-foot-6 junior, paced Lutheran's fourth-quarter spurt with six points, six rebounds and a blocked shot. He finished the game with 12 points.

Guenther led all scorers with 15 points, nine of them in the first quarter.

Guard Dana Seltzer paced the Gauls with 12 points.

Each team made 20 field goals but the Trojans' winning margin came at the foul line, where they made 10 of 15. Webb made just four of 12.

Lutheran shot 38 per cent from the floor (52 attempts) to Webb's 35 per cent (57 attempts).

Each team turned over the ball 13 times. The Trojans committed nine turnovers to Webb's four while the Gauls built a 24-23 halftime lead; in the second half, Webb lost the ball nine times and Lutheran just four times.

Webb took its biggest lead, 33-27, when Steve Galvan stole the ball and scored with 2:07 left in the third period.

Webb will host Notre Dame Tuesday at 6 p.m. Lutheran's next game will be at Sherman Indian Thursday.

Accidents marring Daytona 24-hour

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bob Wollek and Reinhold Joest, co-driving a Porsche 935 turbo, pulled out to a mildly surprising but decisive lead, and prerace favorites Jacky Ickx and Jochen Mass desperately tried to fight back into contention as the 24 Hours of Daytona passed the one-third mark Saturday night.

Mass, of West Germany, slammed into the wall when a tire failed, and tore off most of the right side of his Porsche 935 just past the three-hour point. The crash, one of two serious mishaps in the early going, dropped the team from the lead to 25th.

At 11 p.m., Ickx, of Belgium, and Mass had pushed back up to eighth, 20 laps behind Frenchman Wollek and Joest, of West Germany.

In second place was three-time winner Peter Gregg, almost overlooked in prerace speculation because he switched to a new, unproven Porsche turbo, and his co-driver Jim Busby, four laps back.

Actor Paul Newman, Elliot Forbes-Robinson and Milt Minter, co-driving a Ferrari Daytona, moved up to a very respectable seventh place.

Early mechanical retirees included 1976 co-winner John Fitzpatrick's BMW, and the David Hobbs-Sam Posey-Ronnie Peterson BMW.

The number one French Inaltera prototype, co-driven by Frenchmen Jean Rondeau and Jean Pierre Beltoise, dropped from second place out of contention with several minor problems.

The other serious accident was a terrifying one for Christine Beckers, who, with teammate Lella Lombardi, were running as high as fourth in the other Inaltera.

Miss Beckers, a six-time Belgian women's champion, said a slower car forced her out of the racing line and into the wall.

"I was spinning a few times," she said. "What was very impressive was I saw coming at me those cars. I say, 'Bye, bye. I'm gone.'

"I was not afraid. It was like looking at it from outside the car. I

Strub Stakes today

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Two teen-aged friends, Steve Cauthen and Mark Sellers, both will have their first go in a $100,000 race today when the two apprentice jockeys ride in the Strub Stakes at Santa Anita.

Cauthen, the 16-year-old whiz kid from Kentucky who's become the talk of the racing world with his riding success in the East, will ride Pocket Park in the Strub.

Cauthen rode Pocket Park to victory in the San Fernando Stakes here two weeks ago in the young jockey's first West Coast outing.

Pocket Park, carrying 117 pounds, will be part of an Elmendorf-owned entry that includes Rajab, who'll be ridden by Marco Castaneda and carrying 114 pounds.

Sellers, 17, the leading apprentice rider at the Santa Anita meet, rode Woodsome to victory in the El Encino Stakes, Seller's only stakes appearance thus far. The son of jockey John Sellers, Mark will handle Proud Birdie, with a 117-pound impost, in the Strub.

The 1¼-mile event has drawn a full field of 14 with Crystal Water carrying high weight of 123 pounds.

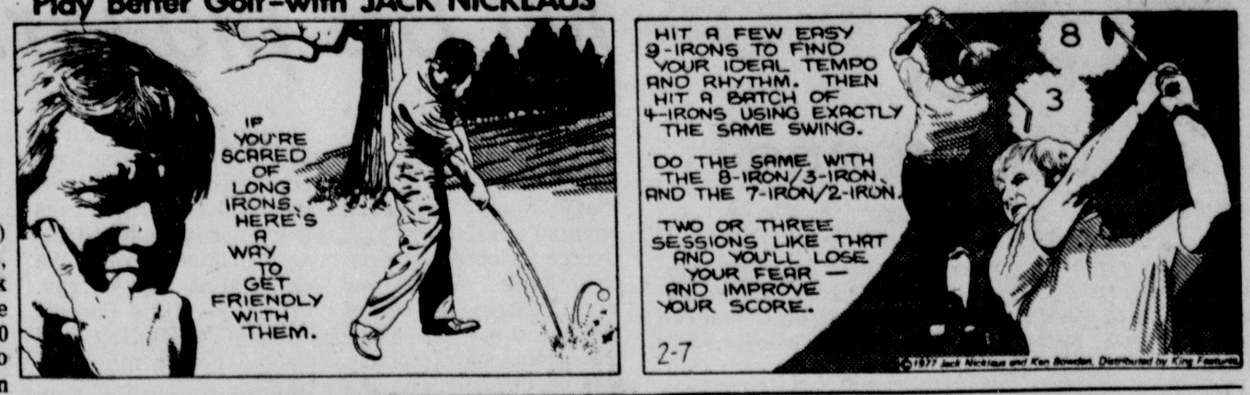
Laffit Pincay Jr., the meet's leading rider, will be aboard Crystal Water.

Don Pierce will ride L'Heureux, who will carry 119 pounds and looms as one of the top contenders in the race for 4-year-olds.

Veteran Bill Shoemaker will ride Kings Cliffe, 115, while Sandy Hawley will be aboard Kirby Lane, 118.

Others in the field are D.B.'s Dream, Jerry Lambert, 117; Properantes, Angel Cordero, 114; Dr. Krohn, Octavio Vergara; American Trader, Darrel McHargue, 117; Romantic Lead, Ron Turcotte, 116; Double Discount, Fernando Toro, 115, and Samburu, Frank Olivares, 115.

Play Better Golf—with JACK NICKLAUS



January in tie for Hawaii lead

HONOLULU (AP) — Easygoing old pro Don January, who once appeared to have a lock on the lead, blew it, then salvaged a tie for the top with a birdie on the last hole—after television coverage ended—had some sage observations concerning today's final round of the $240,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

"There's 18 holes left and a half dozen who can win," said the 47-year-old veteran who regained a tie for the top with Bruce Lietzke with a non-televised, two-putt birdie on the 18th hole of the third round Saturday.

"Unless somebody jumps off to a big start, the last round usually comes down to the last five or six holes. And then it comes down to people.

"It comes down to who shoots at it, who shoots at it good, and who makes it.

"In most cases, I'll shoot for it, go for the pin. That fits the way I play. Maybe it doesn't fit the way somebody else plays.

"If I get in position to win, and can win, fine. If not, I'll just go home on Monday and forget about it."

The hard-hitting Lietzke, who acquired the first title of his pro career with a playoff victory over Gene Littler at Tucson earlier this year, looked at the big board showing the standing of the leaders and observed:

"I know how tough Don January is. I can't say I'm as confident as I was in Tucson."

January once had a two-stroke lead but blew it with a double bogey six on the 14th hole—out of camera range—and finished with a 69 and a tie with Lietzke at 204.

Non-roster players invited by Angels

ANAHEIM — Seven pitchers, one catcher and the most prolific home run hitter in the Angels' minor league system have been invited by general manager Harry Dalton to join the 40 roster players for spring training.

Righthanders Mike Barlow, Bob Ferris, Dick Lange and Mark Wulfemeyer, southpaws Dan Boone, Skip Pitlock and Luis Quintana and catcher Stan Cliburn will report to the Holtville complex on Feb. 21 and begin workouts the next day. First baseman Willie Mays Aikens, who led the Texas League with 30 home runs and 117 runs batted in, will report with the other position players on Feb. 25.

Etched in the minds of all nine players will be the name of Paul Hartzell. The big righthander reported to camp under similar circumstances last year and not only made the major league roster but emerged as the club's No. 3 starter. Hartzell finished 1976 with a 7-4 record and a 2.77 earned run average, seventh best in the American League.

Lange (9-15) and Quintana (2-3) have pitched for the Angels in past seasons. Barlow was 2-2 with Houston last year and Pitlock has a major league record of 8-8 with San Francisco and the Chicago White Sox.

'Mini-Indy' slated

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

Pomona will be hosting an Indy 500 in miniature next Sunday, with all the flare and competition of that famous auto racing spectacular but minus one big factor — the chance of serious injury to the drivers.

The first annual Ray Charbonneau Memorial Race will be staged at the Thorp R.C. (for radio-controlled) Raceway in Pomona on the 13th. A field of 50 to 60 "drivers", from all over the Southland, will be on hand to compete in a series of races which will last most of the day.

The event is being held under the auspices of a club called PROCAR, that is, Pomona radio-operated club for auto racers.

The cars which will be in action on the 13th are exact duplicates of Indy cars, only one-eighth the size. No, the drivers are not all elves. The mini-cars are operated by radio control, the "drivers" or operators guiding their cars through the turns of the Thorp Raceway from a control stand located right next to the track.

Each operator is equipped with a radio transmitter, like the ones used in remote-control model airplanes. By using the transmitter skillfully, an operator can guide the small cars through a race at speeds reaching 60 mph, with as much ease as the real-life Indy drivers spin around the course.

Sunday's race is being staged to raise donations for the American Cancer Society. Charbonneau, who had been one of the top radio-controlled racers in the Southland and was a member of PROCAR, died recently from the desease.

"Ray was one of our top drivers, so we thought it would be a nice memorial if we staged this race and donated the money raised to the American Cancer Society," said John Thorp, owner of Thorp Raceway and himself a top-notch, or "expert" operator of the mini-cars.

"All drivers participating in Sunday's race will be donating their entry fee to the Cancer Society, and we will be charging the public a 50-cent donation for admission," Thorp noted. "All funds raised will be going to help fight cancer."

Sunday's event will be one of many such races held throughout the Southland for the ever-growing sport of radio-controlled racing. Thorp noted that, while his facility is the only local track, their are several other tracks in the state of California, and the sport now has world-wide participation.

As many as 10 cars can run in any given race, since their are 10 different radio frequencies used. Thorp's oval course is approximately 750 feet in total length, but he also has a road course, and drag races between the cars are also staged.

The cars are surprisingly like real race cars, even down to the type of fuel used, nitro-methane. The condition and type of tires, track surface, etc. are all taken into account in radio-controlled racing, just as they are for real cars.

The public is invited to attend Sunday's racing card at Thorp's facility at 1655 E. Mission Blvd.

Final LL signups set

Drive out 3-putt greens

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

As a guy who has been hanging around golf courses for more than three decades, I feel it's time to advance my idea of how to speed up play. Last week I wrote that two gals can move faster than three or four wild-swinging men.

But just letting the ladies play isn't the answer. The big holdup is on the green.

I have to confess I love temporary greens; you know, those automatic two-putt situations where you bang the ball straight at the hole and don't give a hoot if it goes by one foot or 10. It's an automatic two putts anyway.

Well, I think on busy days the management ought to say all the greens are temporary. Take one good slap at the hole and pick the darn ball up. That way you don't have any of those silly "knee-knockers" that aren't part of golf anyway. Then too, you eliminate those callous characters who always claim they "hit the ball super, but I had six three-putt greens."

Hell, with my system you don't have any alibis. Anyway, in all the years I've watched and played golf, I've never heard a player say, "Oh, I love putting." I've heard hundreds say "I love golf," but not one joker have I heard extol the merits of putting.

So I say take one crack at the cup, then get the heck off the green to the next tee where you can wheel out that driver. I honestly believe a foursome on a weekend could play 18 in less than 5 1/2 hours using the Roche temporary green formula.

Gerald R. Ford, 38th President of the United States, who moved to the desert recently, will become the first former chief executive to play in the Bob Hope Desert Classic, scheduled from Wednesday through Sunday.

Ford's partners Wednesday will be Bob Hope, Sammy Davis Jr., and defending Classic champ Johnny Miller. Tee time is 9:40 a.m. at the 10th at Indian Wells.

The ex-President's pro partner Thursday at Tamarisk will be Dave Stockton, defending PGA champ. They tee off at the first hole at 9:40.

Ford will be paired with Lee Elder on Friday at Bermuda Dunes. They tee off at 10:36 on No. 10. On Saturday Ford's partners are Hope, Jackie Gleason and pro Billy Casper. They go off at 10:36, 1st tee, La Quinta.

Greta Guid won the low gross in the recent Blind Mice event at La Mancha. Alta Hutchins won low net in the first flight. Other winners are: 2nd flight, gross, Madeline Maxwell; net, Marge Franks; 3rd flight, gross, Gloria Soupcoff, net, Bernice Conners.

Best Nine winners at La Mancha recently were Bonnie Woodrow, Laseetta Hieb, Barbara Kohn, Doris Allen, Martha Olney and Belva Stiles.

Ann Beumer shot a 95 to win low gross at Glendora C.C. on Trophy Day. Net winner was June McAlonan with a 65. Other flight winners were Dona Hollett, Lucile South, Alene Sparks, Betty Ann Flint, Cleo Jones, Gert Baker and Claudia Wehrmen.

Herb Schlueter fired a hole in one on the No.6 hole, North Course, Los Serranos C.C. recently. He used his reliable 6-iron on the 175-yard hole.

They really play according to the rules at Red Hill C. C. Con Walburger in the monthly bulletin reports Bob McKennett and his partner Bill Swan ran into trouble on the 14th hole and the team lost a couple of strokes. Swan angled a shot off the fairway into some bushes. Opponent Frank DeSalvo found A Titleist 1, and Bill said it must be his because he was hitting a Titleist 1.

DeSalvo asked, "Can you identify it?" Swan replied, "Well, it was a Titleist 1, a new one." Not good enough.

Rule 23 states "It is the responsibility of the player to put an identifying mark on his ball." Swan had not done so, and even though the Titleist appeared to be his ball, he was penalized stroke and distance.

I've never heard of the penalty being enforced . . . until now, that is.

David Glenz of Miami, Fla., finished late in a 150-man field to win the American Golf Tour tournament Friday with a closing 66, six under par, at California Country Club.

Glenz finished at 205, 11 under par for 54 holes on the 6,843-yard course, winning $5,000 of the $25,000 purse.

Glenz made six birdies and was one stroke behind former U.S. Junior champion Bob Byman until his winning birdies on the 15th and 16th holes.

Byman of Raleigh, N.C., finished at 206 with a closing 67 bogeying his first hole. But then he canned four birds and eagled the long 11th hole with a 70-foot putt from off the green. Byman earned $3,000.

Third finisher was Bob Hoyt, 68-211, followed by Bob Benson and Bob Betley at 211, Arne Dokka and Mark Schmidt at 214. Jim Zimmerman, Jack Ewing and Chuck Montalbano each finished at 215.

The fourth round of the series will be played starting next Wednesday at El Camino Country Club in Oceanside.

"We can't all be the best, but all of us would like to think we could be one of the best," says Jerry McGee, PGA touring pro.

MLBB players demand big$$$

NEW YORK (AP) — A week ago, Joe Morgan was accepting the National League's Most Valuable Player award at a baseball banquet in New York. George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the New York Yankees and one of the biggest spenders in the free-agent marketplace, was on the dais with the Reds' second baseman.

There was a visible shudder at the Cincinnati table when Morgan began his remarks by turning to Steinbrenner with a smile and saying, "Got any money left?"

Welcome to baseball's new order.

The inmates have taken over the asylum, freed of any involuntary long-term obligation to their teams because of their newly won free-agent rights.

Morgan is one of five regulars on the world champion Reds who have not signed for 1977. If you think a lot of money was flying during he first free-agent auction, consider the prices talent like Morgan, Pete Rose, Dave Concepcion, Ken Griffey and George Foster might attract.

All are unsigned and all know that players not signing contracts for 1977 may become free agents. The same is true of players completing six years of major league service. Two dozen major leaguers took advantage of that option last season, creating a new dimension for contract negotiations this winter. Both management and employes have found advantages to long-term deals.

"The players want them for their own protection and clubs want them to assure having a player around for a few years," said Bob Kennedy, the new vice president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Bill Veeck, principal owner if the Chicago White Sox, explains.

"A young kid who comes up wants a multi-year contract because he doesn't know if he'll make the club," he said. "If a player has great potential, the club is interested in the multiyear contract."

"Signings are slower," said Kennedy. "What it boils down to is that it doesn't make any difference how a player played, whether he hit .140 or .340. He's basing his demands on what is being paid out to others."

The Cubs stayed out of the free-agent frenzy but may be involved in a spinoff, anyway. Third baseman Bill Madlock is staging a war of words over his proposed contract numbers and vows not to sign unless they are substantially improved.

"I've won two straight batting titles and I want what I deserve," said Madlock. "When you see what's going on, I don't think my demands are that big."

Another Cub, Bill Buckner, has demanded a multi-year contract with big numbers. And agents like Jerry Kapstein won't like this, but Buckner thinks he can do just as well negotiating for himself as he can when someone else does the talking for him.

George Brett of Kansas City, the American League batting champion, agrees with Buckner's theory. He dismissed Kapstein.

"I couldn't see paying him $100,000 for what he was going to do," said Brett. "I'm the one who goes out and plays. I ought to know what I'm worth."

Brett said he's close to signing a long-term contract. "I'm not going to have any money problems," he said. "We've agreed on the amount. We're just arguing on how I'll get it. Their first offer was more than I was asking for."

It all comes down to money, said Veeck.

The laws of supply and demand will affect the marketplace, according to Veeck.

Mississippi coffee is okra brew

MORTON, Miss. (AP) — Okra, a vegetable used in a variety of soups and stews, has found its way into one Mississippian's coffee brew. He wants the world to have a taste.

The concoctor of the blend is A. Q. Wheeler, a 57-year-old businessman who began experimenting with an okra beverage after tasting a few seeds while visiting a neighboring farm.

After numerous trial runs, and addition of secret ingredients, Wheeler came up with a brew which he says has fooled several coffee lovers.

Wheeler sees a possible profit for his labors, and has applied for a patent for what he calls "Magnolia Koffee."

He said his okra-seed brew would undersell the now-inflationary coffee bean by at least half. "It might cost a dollar a pound, perhaps $1.29," he said.

Ghost Town Gazette 'reborn' in Superior

By JOE WHEELAN
Associated Press Writer

SUPERIOR, Wyo. (AP) — The "Ghost Town Gazette" doesn't pretend to be an up-to-the-minute newspaper, editor Sandra Zbegner says.

But it is an ambitious undertaking in a community that hasn't had its own newspaper for the past 35 years.

"It's something to read in the morning instead of a cereal box," Mrs. Zbegner said of the monthly newspaper she began publishin June.

She said Superior's rebirth during the 1970s helped inspire her to launch the paper. She said Bob Mkarsky, Mayor of this community of 550, suggested that she key the paper on his column about town government.

Now, Mrs. Zbegner writes stories on such things as childbirth techniques and solar radiation.

The name of the newspaper comes straight from the late 1950s and 1960s when the bottom fell out of the community's coal mining economy.

Union Pacific Coal Co. operated mines here to supply coal for its locomotives until the late 1940s. But when the railroad turned to diesel to power its engines, the town's only source of income evaporated.

Without jobs, residents found little reason to continue living in the arid community that lies 7,100 feet above sea level in a hollow on the western edge of the Red Desert. The nearest town of any size is Rock Springs, and it is 30 miles away.

So most of the residents left, seeking jobs elsewhere. Only a handful, mostly retired miners stayed on through the 1960s.

The present decade brought construction of the Jim Bridger Power Plant, a 2,000-megawatt, coal-fired facility owned by Pacific Power & Light Co. and Idaho Power Co.

Weekly Wall Street

Another loser; it's five straight weeks

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, caught up in winter-weather worries, sustained its fifth straight loss since the start of 1977 this past week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 9.64 to 947.89, bringing its loss since New Year's to 56.76 points.

By other measures the week's losses were less extensive. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index eased .05 to 101.88, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index dipped .03 to 55.46.

Big Board volume averaged 23.85 million shares a day, down from 24.83 million the week before.

Analysts in Washington, on Wall Street and elsewhere were busy during the week trying to calculate the potential economic effects of abnormally cold temperatures in the eastern half of the country.

At week's end there were still many unanswered questions, and the data by which investors traditionally keep track of the economy's progress weren't much help.

The government reported a sharp drop in the unemployment rate for January, for example, but then cautioned that its figures were collected before short supplies of natural gas forced many plant closings and layoffs.

Researchers generally agreed that January's figures for inflation, economic growth and corporate profits all would be adversely affected by the cold. The longer-term results, however, remained a subject of conjecture and debate.

Top officials in the Carter administration reserved judgment on whether the President's proposed economic-stimulus plan should be expanded because of the cold.

Wall Street, meanwhile, expressed some discomfort over what final shape the program would take.

Speculation was that Congress would wind up adding spending plans to it that the financial community would regard as inflationary. The lawmakers also were expected to resist the part of the Carter plan that calls for tax breaks for business.

Gulf & Western Industries gave ground in active trading after the company estimated its first quarterly earnings decline in five years.

Chino development scores

The Park sales 'feverish'

Sales at "The Park" are so feverish that Phase I and part of Phase II were sold even before the sales office and model complex could be completed. As an example, 25 couples visited "The Park" on Thanksgiving weekend and 17 bought a home there.

"The Park" is Crowell/Leventhal's new younger family-oriented development in Chino. "The Park" was built around a 6 acre landscaped park filled with such community features as a plush clubhouse, two lighted tennis courts, a swimming pool, a running track and child's playground.

"We feel that the Park's overwhelming acceptance is based on fulfilling the younger family's desires as well as their needs. And our price fits their pocketbook," says Joan Schulz, sales agent for "The Park" and employee of Walker & Lee. "Although younger families want to begin building equity in their own single family home, they miss such apartment type amenities as tennis courts, swimming pools and other recreation related bonuses. The Park offers all this without the prohibitive cost of individual ownership. Our buyers love the concept and we're glad we could provide it."

Single family homes at "The Park" are priced from $42,000 to $51,500 and offer four different floor plans from which to choose, varying in size from the 3 bedroom, 2 bath "Spruce" to the 2 story, 4 bedroom 2½ bath "Pine."

Despite the generous space of the homes, care is exercised to allow families to buy within their budget and add the accents they desire as earnings rise. Examples of this are optional air conditioning, washer, dryer, draperies, electronic ovens and custom carpeting and vinyl flooring of their choice through The Design Centre. The Design Centre allows Crowell/Leventhal buyers the choice of adding these optional features immediately or as their budget allows.

Standard features at "The Park" include: concrete driveways, wood burning fireplaces with gas log lighters, a large 2-car garage, front yard landscaping, a sprinkler system, plush nylon carpeting, stained hardwood cabinetry with fine furniture detailing, country kitchens with economical pilotless gas ranges, oven, double stainless steel sink with disposal and custom fixtures. Cedar shake or tile roofs provide tasteful accents to exteriors.

"The Park" is located at 4300 Heather Circle in Chino and the sales trailer is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Ontario homes sales are brisk

Butler Housing Corp.'s Suncrest Homes/Ontario has been selling at an average of five per week since sales began in mid-December and is three-quarters sold out, reports Wes Weissinger, regional sales director for Walker & Lee, Inc.

"These homes have been well-received for a number of reasons," Weissinger said. "First and foremost, the prices are very affordable. Second, veterans can move in with just $1 down. Third, Butler Housing has a strong reputation for quality construction. Fourth, the homes feature attractive exterior detailing."

Four single-story, two- to four-bedroom plans are offered. Exteriors are of stucco with wood beams, and wood-grain siding.

Nearby recreational facilities include golf courses, tennis courts, parks, Ontario Speedway, and skiing at Mt. Baldy. The famed Chaffey College is nearby, as are elementary, junior and senior high schools.

Suncrest Homes have vaulted ceiling living rooms, country kitchens with sliding glass doors onto patio areas, master suites with private baths, attached two-car garages with separate laundry areas. One plan has a window seat in the den/ bedroom. Every home has a wood-burning fireplace in either the living or family room.

Modified floorplans on pre-assigned lots enable families to buy basic plans that have been tailored to their needs. In addition, each home was designed and preconstructed to enable the homeowner to add a bedroom and bath at the rear of the house in the future.

Prices for Suncrest Homes/Ontario start at $34,950 with FHA/VA and conventional financing. Veterans may move in with only $1 down, paying no closing costs.

Suncrest Homes/Ontario may be reached by taking the San Bernardino Freeway to the Vineyard Avenue offramp. Continue north to the corner of Sixth Street.

For housing industry

1976 was most unusual market

The year 1976 undoubtedly will be remembered by the California housing industry as "That was the year that was — just about anything you care to call it."

George Fulton, corporate marketing vice president of Walker & Lee, Inc., the Anaheim-based firm that sold 13,888 new and pre-owned homes in 1976, reviewed it as "one of the most volatile and unusual housing markets in United States history" in a "Housing Insights" paper sent to the firm's builder clients.

"Developments sold out overnight," he recalled. "Lotteries to determine if you could qualify to become a purchaser became common. It was one of the best years ever recorded in the California resale home market. And, if more new homes had been available, it might well have been the best sales year in the new home market."

Analyzing the year that many non-California homebuilders refused to believe, Fulton said:

"The old rule of supply and demand was the primary cause for the frantic activity. But, nine other subtle factors added fuel to the fire: increasing personal disposal income; a huge pent-up demand created by low new-home production in 1974, 1975, and 1976; evolution of the World War II population bulge into family-home-buying years; high appreciation of used homes producing large equities and a substantial move-up market; the increasing number of working wives, providing added capital for home purchases; continued emergence of singles, widows, and the divorced as a major market segment; continuing net increases in population; the emergence of speculators who recognized the high return on housing investments; and stable and acceptable mortgage rates."

To study the year in closer detail, Fulton presented figures developed in a Walker & Lee Buyer Profile computer report on 2,700 new home sales made during the first half of 1976, the latest period for which detail figures presently are available. About 75 per cent of the sales were of single-family homes; the rest, condominiums and townhouses.

This study examined the purchases according to the type of home the buyer previously occupied. Former homeowners accounted for 53 per cent of all sales; former apartment renters, 25 per cent; former home renters; 10 per cent; former townhouse owners, 8 per cent; and other types of residences, 4 per cent.

Fulton noted two factors that kept down the average prices in the study. Most of the projects had been conceived and bid in 1974 and 1975, when prices were lower. And, a high percentage of the sales were in "the new bedroom communities," outside the urban areas where prices have risen dramatically.

By Lewis Homes

The Highlands boasts quality

A home buyer can "think rich" without necessarily being affluent in pocketbook, is the way development executive Roger G. Lewis describes thousands of potential buyers who feel they have been priced out of the quality home market.

"You also have to remember," he said, "that many household heads feel that they must accept a home of lesser quality in order to put away funds enough to pay their children's way through college."

But can the buyer have it both ways? It was to solve this dilemma that Lewis Homes applied its skills to creating The Highlands, a community of single family homes in Etiwanda.

"And we did it without skimping on quality of construction, said the Lewis Homes vice president. "We gave the Highlands the same attentive care that we give our much higher priced homes."

The Highlands centers just off Rochester Avenue, one half mile north of Foothill Boulevard. It is in an area of spectacular views.

Five furnished models are on display, representing the wide variety of stylings from which buyers may choose.

Purchase price is from $33,950 to $37,250, with possession obtainable on VA, FHA, or conventional terms. They are three and four bedroom in design and come equipped with continuous cleaning ovens, range and dishwasher.

Livingrooms, hallways and master bedrooms are carpeted from wall to wall. Other interior refinements include window drapes, cultured marble pullman tops, ash kitchen cabinets and overhead lights in all bedrooms. Some models feature walk-in closets in the master bedroom.

The Highlands may be reached by taking the San Bernardino Freeway east to the Haven Avenue exit at the Ontario Motor Speedway. From there the route is north on Haven to Foothill Boulevard, east (right) 1¾ miles to Rochester Avenue, then north (left) beyond Foothill Boulevard to Church Street.

Models and sales office are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — I often awake at night with my hair, head, face and neck drenched with perspiration. A towel on top of the pillowcase never stays in place, so I made some pillowcases out of terry cloth towels. These are much more practical than regular cases. — MRS. J.A.B.

© 1977 by NEA, Inc.

●

DEAR POLLY — After storing foodstuffs such as cabbage or cantaloupe in plastic containers, these often retain the odor. I wash them while they're moist and rub in dry baking soda. — ANNETTE.

●

DEAR POLLY — I find it easier to clean the bathtub just after taking a bath, so I spread a little bathroom cleaner in the tub while it is draining and still wet. — TERRY.

●

DEAR POLLY — I clean the slime from bullheads or any fish without scales by holding them under running water and rubbing with nylon net. — BERTHA.

●

DEAR POLLY — When I have used the oven, I turn it off and put in a dish-pan of cold water. This cools the oven more quickly and does away with that oven heat that is such a problem in hot weather. I then use the water for scrubbing the kitchen floor, so do not have to use extra water. — MARY A.

●

DEAR POLLY — Cut the best parts from your worn leather gloves and save them to use for making covered leather buttons or pretty leather trim for clothing. — MRS. R.F.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — When marking-pen marks appear on washable garments, I soak the stained area in a little bit of milk. After the milk becomes discolored which is usually almost immediately I change the milk and soak again. After about three soakings the stain is completely gone. — DEBI.

●

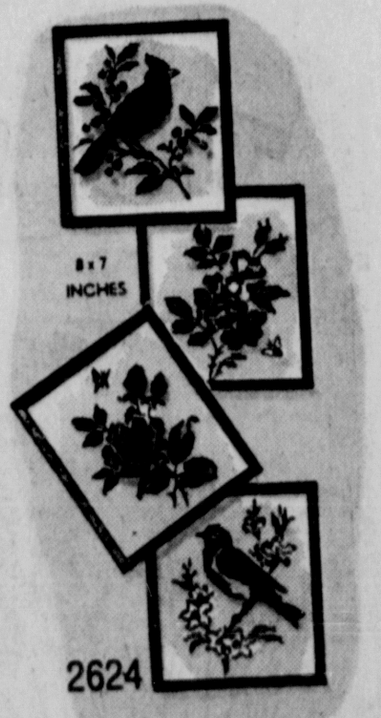
DEAR POLLY — Store cast-iron skillets with paper towels between them so as to absorb any stray moisture that might cause rust. — ANGELA.

●

DEAR POLLY — When I take my permanent-press tablecloths out of the washing machine I fold them twice, hang them on a clothes hanger and let them dry. There are neither creases nor wrinkles. — HELEN B.

●

DEAR POLLY — Use clear plastic fishing line for sewing braided rugs together, as it does not break or wear out and the rug will last twice as long. — D.H.



Four Lovely Panels
Embroider these bird and flower panels in simple cross-stitch. Pattern No. 2624 has hot-iron transfer for four designs (7" x 8" each); color chart.

WESTWARD HO

James Arness stars as mountain man Zeb Macahan in "How the West Was Won," a special limited series in three parts, premiering on The ABC Sunday Night Movie (9 to 11PM), and continuing on The ABC Monday Night Movie (same time) on February 7 and February 14.

Also starring in the drama, which is based on the renowned motion picture of the same name, are Eva Marie Saint and Bruce Boxleitner. The new three-parter was filmed primarily on location in Kanab, Utah.

In the initial episode of the saga of a family's Westward trek in the 1860s, buckskin-clad Zeb Macahan leaves his cavalry scouting assignment when a colonel who hates Indians orders the annihilation of an Arapaho village. When Zeb rides in to warn the village, he is shot by one of the cavalrymen and left for dead. Zeb, badly wounded, rounds up the surviving Indian children and sets out for Fort Kearny, 60 miles away. After making sure the children find new homes, and having recovered from his wounds, Zeb returns to the farm where his brother's widow, Kate Macahan (Eva Marie Saint), has been living with her family since the death of her husband. The Macahans have been waiting for the Civil War to end so that Uncle Zeb can lead them on their interrupted journey to Oregon.

Guess who's coming to dinner?

If you're lucky, it's just a burglar who's come only to steal. If you're not so lucky, it's a homicidal maniac who'll take nothing less than your life.

This sort of urban violence goes on day and night, even in nice neighborhoods like yours. And the police can't do much to stop it. So you better find out how to protect yourself.

Jerry Dunphy can help you. All this week he'll show simple and inexpensive methods of safeguarding your home...and your life.

Watch the Eyewitness Closeup "How To Beat the Bad Guys" every night this week at 6 o'clock on Channel 7.

CLOSE-UP

'CPO SHARKEY'

Don Rickles, currently starring in CPO Sharkey (Wednesdays at 8PM on NBC), knows why his two previous series had problems.

"The reason my ABC show failed some years ago is easy to understand. The two other networks had the gall to put programs opposite my show. Then, when I had a series on CBS, somebody was running around the country pulling out the plugs on television sets that were tuned in to my show. So naturally, the ratings were low!"

He's kidding, of course, but he's very serious when he says that he believes CPO Sharkey creator/producer Aaron Rubin has come up with the key to properly utilizing Rickles' unique comedy talent. "I think that Ruben has found a way to show the different facets of the real me," says Rickles. "In CPO Sharkey my character combines my image as the night club insulter together with my 'other side,' the kind of guy who kisses his wife and kids at home, takes out the garbage, and walks the dog just like everyone else. I think—and hope—we've finally come up with a winner in Sharkey--otherwise I'll have to go back to selling pencils on street corners."

No danger of that, because Rickles, one of the highest paid performers in night clubs and concerts, is financially well off. But he does very much want a hit series, not only for his own pride, but for the sake of his marvelous supporting cast, including Elizabeth Allen, Jonathan Daly, Harrison Page, and the hilarious youngsters who portray the recruits on his series.

In CPO Sharkey, Rickles portrays a hard-bitten sailor, a veteran of World War II, who has risen to the rank of chief petty officer and who must now face up to "Today's Navy." His commanding officer is a woman, his fellow CPO is a black man, and his group of recruits is a collection of every size, shape, color and background who are protected by today's comparatively lenient rules and regulations.

"There are situations that let me be brash and sarcastic, and at the same time compassionate and humble. I have good vibes about this series," says Rickles.

'SECRET WORLD OF REPTILES'

The Secret World of Reptiles, the first in a series of six two-hour action/adventure features for television, produced by Bill Burrud, premieres on KHJ, Channel 9, Wednesday from 8 to 10PM. The film traces the history of the reptile world from its prehistoric beginnings to the present time—no mean undertaking because 70 million years have passed since the last known dinosaurs, ancestors of the present reptile family, disappeared from the face of the earth.

The production marks an innovation for Burrud, pioneer producer of wildlife television packages such as Animal World—now in its 10th consecutive year on the air—and 12 other series all of 30 minute duration. It marks the Burrud Company's debut into long-form TV production and according to Burrud may be the forerunner of his entry into the field of theatrical motion pictures, in addition to television.

The Secret World of Reptiles was undertaken only after almost two years of extensive study by Burrud's research department to insure its authenticity. Burrud camera crews circled the globe to obtain action shots and close-ups of the awesome and often lethal "direct descendants" of the dinosaur age. Some of the exotic settings for the film were the Amazon, India, East Africa and even Komodo Island, a remote speck in the Eastern Sea, as well as the American desert.

Seen in their natural habitats are such creatures as the Komodo dragon, a virtual 10-foot reincarnation of the dinosaur of yesteryear; Asiatic cobras in action; African snakes, anacondas in close-up and many other fascinating species—a dramatic panorama of the reptile family. Highlights include a battle between a king snake and a deadly sidewinder and the capture of a dangerous diamond-back rattler. At one point, narrator Marvin Miller poses a provocative question: Is it possible that in some isolated spot, some unexplored atoll, a dinosaur may have survived? He leaves the answer to the imagination of viewers.

TELE-TALK

Jeff MacKay, who plays Don French on NBC's Baa Baa Black Sheep series, waited a long time for that one big break, got it, then almost lost it because of a second big break. Jeff's breaks, in chronological order, concerned (1) his career and (2) his bones.

"Five the Hard Way," which will be aired Tuesday at 8PM is the 17th Baa Baa episode to go before the cameras, but the first to spotlight Jeff. The story has to do with French trying to keep his father, a newspaper publisher, from visiting him at the front. Between scenes during the first day of shooting, Jeff was sparring with W.K. Stratton (Casey) when he tripped over a cable, fell, and broke his left wrist. He was rushed to a nearby hospital, the bones were set and, within hours, he was back on the set. But his arm was in a cast and had to remain in one, said the doctor, for five weeks.

"I knew production could not be held up for five days, let alone five weeks," said Jeff, "so I really thought I'd lost my big chance." But the producers huddled with staff writer Ken Pettus, figured out a way to write Jeff's cast into French's story, and the show went on. "From now on," said MacKay, "I'd like my breaks in smaller bunches."

Robert Young and Victoria Racimo have been cast in two of the pivotal guest-starring roles of NBC's Best Seller: The Rhinemann Exchange, now being filmed in Mexico. Young portrays the American ambassador to Argentina during World War II, and Racimo plays a mysterious Indian girl who aids U.S. Intelligence agent David Spaulding (Stephen Collins).

Colette," a two-hour NBC World Premiere motion picture for television, starring Susan Clark in the title role, has been set for production by Universal Television. The Barbara Turner teleplay will cover a crucial period in the life of the internationally acclaimed French novelist—a period in which she was able to find and establish her own identity.

★ ★ ★

Actor-composer-musician Isaac Hayes, Oscar winner for his musical theme for the film "Shaft," will make a second appearace on NBC's The Rockford Files—in the role of ex-con Gandy Fitch in the upcoming episode, "Just Another Polish Wedding." In his first appearance, Hayes played a man cleared by Rockford (James Garner) on the charge of slaying his wife.

★ ★ ★

Actor Richard Dunne, who plays Daryll Stevens in the NBC daytime serial Another World, also is a professional musician. He sings and plays guitar with the rock quintet known as Sumus.

★ ★ ★

Roy Thinnes, France Nuyen, Hawaiian actor Zulu and Ward Costello will star in "Diamond Head," a 90-minute program development project for NBC which is being filmed in Honolulu. The QM Production will feature Ian McShane, Eric Braedon, Dennis Patrick and Alex Henteloff as guest stars.

The drama concerns the efforts of a United States counter-intelligence agent, codenamed "Diamond Head," to thwart the attempted theft by a double agent of a 21st century chemical explosive. Producer Paul Ki wrote the script.

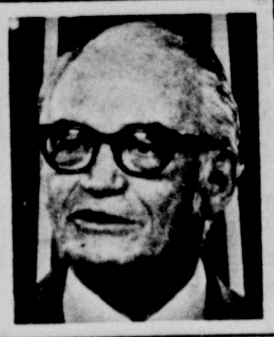
ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SEN. BARRY GOLDWATER (R.-Ariz.)



After the beautiful speech Ronald Reagan made about you in 1964, plus his campaigning on your behalf, why did you "stab him in the back" (as Mrs. Reagan said) by criticizing him in the last election and thereby hurt the conservative cause?—Bruce Hays, Sacramento, Calif.

● I was critical of Mr. Reagan only once—when I felt he was wrong about the Panama Canal. I still do and am joined in this by almost everyone who knows what's going on down there. As to Mrs. Reagan's remark, my country comes before friendship.

FOR CAROLINE BIRD,
author of The Case Against College

Why do you say college isn't the place for an ambitious person?—S.J., Bangor, Maine

● If you look at successful people who are happy in their work, you'll find that most were in the right place at the right time. You could well miss such an opportunity in a classroom. If you're undecided about a career, it makes sense to take a year and have as many working experiences as possible. Once you find something you're interested in pursuing, then it's time to do the learning.

FOR JEAN MARSH, star of Upstairs, Downstairs

Why do you think your portrayal of an English maid is really true to life?—V.S., Gary, Ind.

● It's difficult to explain to Americans that English servants were just as snobbish as their masters and that they maintained the status quo. I think people believe me as Rose because I'm a very old-fashioned girl, a very moral girl actually. And much of my actual personality is like a servant's has to be—just observing and thinking.

FOR MICHAEL LANDON, actor

How are you most like and most different from Charles Ingalls on "Little House on the Prairie?"—Diane Grabowski, Cocoa Beach, Fla.

● I guess that I'm most like Charles Ingalls in my love for my family. Nothing in the world, and that includes all of Hollywood and show business, is as important to me as the health and happiness of my wife and children. I am different from him in that I live in a nice home and don't have to worry about where I'm going to get money for the children's shoes.

FOR REDD FOXX, star of Sanford and Son

Do you resent the fact that your climb to stardom took so many years?—L.V., Oxford, Miss.

● Yes. I've been living in Hollywood for 25 years and have never done a movie until now. Twenty-five years of my life wasted—I could have played a picture where I could run, instead of walk like Sanford. The best thing about the good old days is they're gone. That's how I feel—you look forward to the future. Things used to be real rough.

FOR HELEN REDDY, singer

Does your daughter want to be a singer, or does she want to do something else?—A. Quinn, Troy, N.Y.

● Traci has no desire to sing or go into show business. She's more concerned with ecology. Her next love is gymnastics. She got involved last year in L.A., when she saw an exhibition by the Soviet team. However, I don't think she'll ever be a champion; she'd rather watch than do.

FOR LEE GRANT, star of Voyage of the Damned

As one who's star-struck, I'm curious if stars like you ever feel that way, too?—L.R., Bartlesville, Okla.

● I'm in awe of the greats. I'll never forget when I saw Sir Laurence Olivier in Beckett. I was so bowled over by his performance, I had to go backstage to congratulate him. To illustrate my feelings, I decided to throw myself at his feet and while on my knees say, "This is to show you what I think of your acting." When he opened the door, I was so nervous, I never said any of the things I wanted to.

FOR IAN MITCHELL,
formerly with the Bay City Rollers

Why did you leave the group?—June Blaisdell, Framingham, Mass.

● Simple—my sanity was at stake. I couldn't even walk out on the streets or go to the movies without being mobbed. So when we weren't onstage, we were locked up within four walls. It really was enough to drive me insane.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

What can you tell me about Luciana Avedon, the model and writer. Is she really a princess?—V.A., Yonkers, N.Y.

● She was born in Rome, the daughter of Francesco Malgeri, a prominent Italian journalist. She became a princess by her former marriage to Prince Niccolo Pignatelli. (They had two children, Fabrizia, in her third year at Princeton, and Diego, at school in England.) Luciana speaks four languages, has been a fashion designer and a beauty consultant and is author of Luciana Avedon's Body Book.

FOR LEE MERIWETHER, star of Barnaby Jones

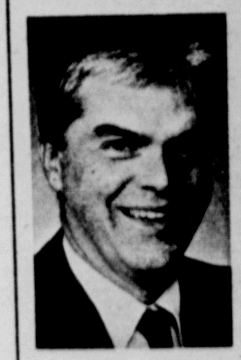
Okay, we all know you're pretty, but can you do character parts?—S.S., Devils Lake, N.D.

● Just stand back, let me take off my makeup, and I can do any character role! That's the main reason I like to work in Theater West; I can choose my roles—even heavy character ones. I've tried almost everything, from a man in The Legend of Lylah Clare to a 70-year-old woman in Mission: Impossible to 15 different women in Spoon River Anthology onstage.

PRO AND CON

Should We Spend More Money On Space Exploration?



PRO: Dr. Hans Mark, Director of National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center in California

Yes. Only by stepping outside of our daily frame of reference do we gain the insights to deal with the problems that bedevil our daily lives. It's no accident, I believe, that public concern for assaults on our environment solidified when the first photographs of the earth taken by our space explorers were published some years ago. The beautiful, fragile sphere floating in infinite space illustrated as no words could the finite nature of our environment. As long as we are free to imagine, we will and must explore. In doing so, we demonstrate our humanity as well as our greatness.

CON: Brant Calkin, President, Sierra Club, a national environmental action group

No. We already have reaped substantial benefits from space exploration and, in the process, asked more questions than we have the ability to answer. The application of space technology to terrestrial needs, however, is tardy. It's no criticism of putting a man on the moon to note that we still cannot transport people into and out of our cities. Paradoxically, we have better control of human waste in space than we do in our rivers and oceans. While we need not completely turn away from space-oriented research, this planet's health and well-being must be our first priority.

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.
But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.
Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.
So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.
Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.
New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.
That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.
Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

THE NEW JAMES BOND FILM—GIRLS, GIMMICKS AND SUPER FANTASY

The new James Bond girl is Barbara Bach, a gorgeous American-born 27-year-old who thinks Bond is not all he's cracked up to be.

Barbara Bach costars with Roger Moore in the latest Bond epic, The Spy Who Loved Me.

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

The James Bond films are supposedly harmless fantasies in which everyone (Remember how the late President Kennedy enjoyed Bond?) can identify with an all-powerful hero who has two primary things going for him—stupendous gimmicks and even more stupendous girls.

First the gimmicks. The Spy Who Loved Me is the name of the new Bond film, and the producer promises that this will be the biggest and most expensive ($9½ million) one yet. One reason may be the specially built-up supertanker I saw on the set in London—it's big enough to swallow three full-sized nuclear subs. And Bond will, of course, have his own special means of transportation — a specially built car that can conveniently plunge into the water and convert into an efficient submarine with harpoon guns, detachable explosive bumper and a supply of black liquid smoke screen. But even so, can these measure up to some of my old favorites? There was, for instance, the fabulous $45,000 car in Goldfinger that, by the time Thunderball was made, had an ejector seat, machine guns, front- and rear-bumper overriders that extended as ramming devices, tire slashers, revolving license plates, radio telephone, radar screen and retractable bullet-proof shields. I also have a soft spot in my heart for the flame-throwing tank in Dr. No and the magnetizing device that infallibly tripped jackpots in a plush Las Vegas casino in Diamonds Are Forever. And then there was . . . But I could go on forever, and it's time to get on to the Bond girls.

If the Bond gimmicks can be taken as fun, can the girls? Richard Maibaum, who scripted eight of the 10 Bond films, says yes—"The Bond girls have become high camp, a spoof." But others have been made a little uncomfortable by the fact that none of them survives a film. Diana Rigg, for instance, found that her honeymoon was also the end of the line in On Her Majesty's Secret Service, while, in Goldfinger, Shirley Eaton was painted to death. So I asked the new Bond girl, Barbara Bach, how she feels about it all. "Bond," she said, "is a male chauvinist pig who uses girls to shield himself against bullets." But she does think that this film has more to offer an actress than the earlier ones: "I'm actually a counterpart of Bond. Before, the girls kind of flifted in and out and were usually killed to boot. Of course, I'm not as important as Bond—after all, these are his stories—but my part is the most important female role ever written for any Bond film."

Ian Fleming, Bond's creator, was a connoisseur of beautiful women. He wanted his heroines to be charming, exotic, versatile, intelligent and, most of all, to possess ample sex appeal. Based on this and on the leading women in the nine previous Bond films, Barbara has all the qualities needed. She's beautiful, 27, 5'7" tall, measures 35"-24"-35", weighs 124 pounds, has wide hazel eyes, high cheek bones, an unplaceable but interesting accent, a model's taste for chic and plenty of self-assurance. But even with all of this, can she go on to better things? After all, a good many of the Bond girls faded into oblivion almost simultaneously with their demises on the screen, and, until now, Barbara was virtually an unknown American actress who appeared in a rash of Italian documentaries and B pictures like The Tarantula With The Black Stomach. But, if nothing else, Barbara has confidence: "I hope this role will trigger success for me," she says, "because I want to go on to become a good actress and appear in good films."

And maybe she does have a chance. She was chosen last August from hundreds of possibilities to play Anya Asamova, the female Russian spy in the new film, but her confidence was slightly shaken over a celebration dinner given by the producer and director. "Just one thing," the producer said, "Don't gain any weight." "And have your teeth capped," said the director. "After that," Barbara adds, "I didn't know what they wanted of me."

Will she survive the film? All she'll say is that "There never was a part in any of the other Bond films like the one I play." But I should add that scriptwriter Maibaum has said that the girls "had to die because we couldn't hamper Bond in the next episode. After all, he's not the typical nine-to-five wage earner with a wife and a house with a picket fence." TV

HOW BOND ALMOST GOT HIS

For those who think Bond is a chauvinist, take comfort in some of the ways he almost met his end; they are so fantastic and tongue-in-cheek that they bear repeating.

From Russia with Love saw him attacked by a helicopter and his neck almost broken by a Turkish wrestler. Lotte Lenya also tried to stab his shins with poison blades that came out of the ends of her shoes. Goldfinger had him come within an inch of being bisected by a laser beam and decapitated by a flying metal-rimmed hat. In Thunderball he survived a plane crash, was sealed in a cave to drown, smashed in a hydrofoil and pursued on a motorcycle equipped with a flame thrower. For You Only Live Twice he took on four helicopters while flying a one-man autogiro, was nearly blown up along with a whole island and narrowly missed falling into a pond of man-eating piranhas.

He faced death again in On Her Majesty's Secret Service by being machine-gunned and exposed to a deadly virus, while in Diamonds Are Forever he was stuffed in a coffin and headed for premature incineration, careened through a narrow alley by putting his car up on two wheels, was gassed and entombed in a concrete pipe in the desert. He lived through that only to face lethal darts, a fiendish pair of pincers that replaced the villain's missing hands in Live and Let Die, as well as poisonous snakes, shots from the mouth of a remote-controlled smiling scarecrow, nearly being shoved out of a private plane and an airplane chase which ended in a turmoil of tearing metal and seven totaled Cessna planes and a DC 3. Oh, yes, he also tangled with 1,500 crocodiles.

In The Man With The Golden Gun he was attacked by martial arts experts, chased by high-powered diamond fragments and almost hugged to death by massive Sumo wrestlers. In The Spy Who Loved Me, he's pursued on skis by rifle-firing enemies, dives off a cliff and is saved by a parachute, faces death at the mouth of Jaws, who earned his name by his two rows of vicious steel teeth, is attacked by a carload of gunmen, shot at from a helicopter and faces drowning twice by being trapped in a supertanker and again in a lab when it submerges too deep.

HELPING KIDS AVOID EMOTIONAL PROBLEMS

Strict or permissive? Indulging or denying? These examples of extremes in parental behavior may help you to steer a middle course in raising your children.

By Theodore Irwin

What makes some kids so extroverted, others nervous and uptight, still others quiet and introspective? Basically, there are two answers. The first, of course, is that the child simply is that way and that it's perfectly normal behavior. But sometimes these personality characteristics are developed through the family environment and become exaggerated to the point that they can indicate emotional problems. When that becomes the case, the parents may want to reassess the way they handle the child. No expert's advice can substitute for a parent's experience and wisdom, but the following list may help some parents who are still not sure about what approach to use. For example, to cite extremes, parents may be:

Overpermissive. These parents are likely to envision an "ideal" child, one who is given a chance to fully develop emotionally and intellectually, beyond conventional constraints.

Nothing is wrong with that, but when taken to an extreme, conduct is allowed to take root, without interference, that may be against the parents' own standards. Even undesirable acts are glossed over. One child psychologist contends that these parents are really intimidated by their child. Then, instead of getting the hoped-for "self-directed" child, free to express himself, what they rear may become an adult who is insecure and disorganized.

Strict Disciplinarians. Inwardly, the strict parents long for a child who will conform to rules of conduct as they see them. As viewed by Elmer Berkel, chief psychologist of the Sarasota, Fla., school system, these parents want the youngster to obey, to be pliable, to listen to them and let Dad or Mom make all the decisions for him. "They want to retain full control over their child," says the psychologist, "up through the teen-age years, to see that he observes and honors their moral and religious values."

When a child disobeys or breaks a rigid rule, many of these parents resort to slaps, beatings, angry abuse or frequent threats of punishment. Others punish by withdrawing privileges. Such parents are surprised when they find their children growing up to feel that other people are threatening. But psychological tests indicate that the kids did not feel free to express their hostility and were either very easily discouraged or unusually persistent.

Overprotective. Most often, notes Berkel, parents tend to be overprotective with an only child, with the youngest and with girls. They see their offspring as going out into a hostile world, incapable of coping with problems. So they want to safeguard the child against getting hurt, to shelter him from daily knocks and thus enable him to grow up "strong" and self-sufficient.

To cite a fairly typical case, one mother was so relentlessly concerned with every minute detail of how her son functioned that she even checked her child's breathing and measured the food he ate.

According to Rita Rabinowitz, supervisor of the mental health department at Abbot House, an institution for neglected children in Irvington, N.Y., "such a mother is frightened, trying to hold her child close to her beyond normal nurturing. That child, too dependent on his mother, tied to her apron strings, is likely to see everyone in the outside world as bent on doing him harm."

Overemotional. How these parents behave toward their child is a matter of temperament and usually is not deliberate. They may not be at all aware of what they're doing, except to show how they feel—without any intent of molding the child through these emotional outbursts.

Betty, at seven, has just such excitable parents. The uproars at home flood her with rage and fear. She has no way of judging what's wrong or right because neither Mommy nor Daddy takes the time to explain the reason for their flareups. To her, words don't have a meaning—she hears only the noise.

Mirroring her parents' turbulence, Betty has learned she must shout in order to be heard at home and to talk fast if she's not to be interrupted. With friends, her ability to listen has closed down; she is argumentative, often hits out at other kids or pushes them around. Betty tends to use force to get what she wants.

Perfectionists. Perfectionist parents are compulsive and want to achieve goals for the child that they themselves have not attained. They expect the youngster never to accept second best, to come out always on top.

Both Paul and Gloria Johnston, for example, hold very high standards and believe their son Danny must always perform to their satisfaction. Yet they don't pay attention to Danny's capacities at his age. His father, particularly, demands that the boy get top grades in every subject at school. His mother insists on her son always keeping his clothes spotlessly clean and tidying up his room meticulously.

A boy like Danny is apt to be nonaggressive, according to a study by psychologist William McCord of children in Cambridge, Mass., and is inclined to be overanxious and uncertain about his relations with others. Failing to achieve perfection, he may consider nothing is worth trying and could become a school or college dropout.

Indifferent. "Emotional desertion is more prevalent than physical abandonment," noted the late Dr. Chaim Ginott, the well-known child psychologist. "One of its many faces is disinterest and detachment."

Certain adults are so constituted that they flinch from intimacy, avoid physical contact with a child and find it hard to show genuine warmth. Typically, the father remains aloof, disdaining bids for attention. The child is taken care of in a mechanical way; in effect, he's subtly or covertly rejected. Still, parents may go through the motions of caring—providing toys, spending money and the like.

Dr. Helen De Rosis, New York psychiatrist and author of Parent Power/ Child Power, calls the offspring of indifferent parents "nothing" children.

"Very early," Dr. De Rosis says, "children must have someone as a sounding board or they cannot learn who they are, what they are, what they stand for. As no interest is taken in them, they cannot feel any interest in themselves. Left alone too much, they may develop in strange ways. These children may be either depressed and pathetic or active and disruptive, demanding to be noticed in any way, good or bad."

Some of these youngsters turn out to be stutterers. Studies by speech therapists have revealed that one of the strongest feelings of stutterers is hidden or veiled rejection. Undernourished emotionally in a family lacking warmth, children will probably have a hard time developing an intimate love relationship in later life. They may grow up to be loners, choosing an occupation in which they can devote themselves entirely to working with things other than people.

All of these examples, of course, are extremes, and most parents fall somewhere in between. Nevertheless, the Child Study Association in New York City notes some pointers we all should keep in mind when raising our children.

Understanding. To understand them we must first try to understand ourselves. Whose needs are we satisfying —ours or our child's? We must consider the kind of conduct we'd like him to imitate—or not to imitate.

Expectations. We need to be realistic—and elastic—about what our child can achieve at every age, whether it's learning to dress alone or to express himself clearly. Faced with too-high expectations of a task to be done, he's likely to fail.

Clarification. It's important that we clearly explain our family rules and values and that the child understands what we want.

Listening. Communication is a two-way process, and listening is quite different from hearing.

Behavior. Once we decide how to handle intolerable behavior, it's important always to follow through. Threats without action only confuse kids.

Honesty. If we're not truthful, how can we expect our children to be?

Free-lance writer Theodore Irwin is the author of Understanding and Overcoming Depression.

NEWS ON NUTRITION

How do you know whether your diet contains enough vitamins? Here's a list of those we all should be getting —along with their best-known natural sources.

By Rachel Adams

If we want to keep our good health, vitamins are essential. The best way to get the ones we need is through a well-balanced diet. That means eating products from the four basic food groups—dairy goods; breads and cereals; meat, fish and poultry; fruits and vegetables. Nutritionists also say that we should eat a variety of the foods within each group.

But not all of us do get a well-balanced diet, so we've prepared a list of some of the most important vitamins and their major natural sources. Check them to see whether your diet is supplying the vitamins you require. (The mineral iron, too, is an important daily requirement, especially for women before menopause, who deplete it during their monthly cycle. Iron-rich foods that should be on the family menu would include spinach, walnuts, bran flakes, prune juice and asparagus).

Vitamin A

What it does: It is known to be essential to the normal growth and function of skin tissue. Vitamin A is most important for eyes. By helping them maintain their ability to differentiate between light and dark, they prevent night blindness, a degenerative disease. It also increases resistance to nose and throat infections.

Where to get it: Apricots, butter or margarine, cream, egg yolks, liver, milk, yellow and leafy green vegetables, whole-milk cheese.

Vitamin B_1

What it does: It is needed for the proper functioning of nerve tissues. This vitamin promotes good muscle tone, normal growth and stimulates the appetite.

Where to get it: Brewer's yeast, chicken, dried peas, fish, lean meats, lentils, milk (whole, skimmed, nonfat dry, evaporated), peanuts, meats (liver, kidneys, sweetbreads), wheat germ, whole-grain or enriched breads, cereals and flours.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

Vitamin B_2

What it does: The vitamin promotes healthy skin and hair, good digestion and sound nerves. It also increases resistance to infection, general physical weakness and some eye conditions.

Where to get it: Brewer's yeast, chicken, dried peas, eggs, fish, green and leafy vegetables, kidneys, lean meats, liver, all milk, wheat germ.

Vitamin B_6

What it does: It's an important aid in the synthesis of protein and regulation of the nervous system. The vitamin also helps the body retain its salt and water balance.

Where to get it: Whole-grain cereals, soybeans, wheat, beef, lamb, liver, pork and veal.

Vitamin B_{12}

What it does: Without this vitamin, there would be no proper utilization of protein, fats and carbohydrates. It's also essential for production of red blood cells.

Where to get it: Beef, dairy products, egg yolk, liver, oysters and shrimp.

Niacin

What it does: This vitamin is a factor in the cure and prevention of pellagra, a disease that affects the skin, gastrointestinal tract and central nervous system. It's also helpful in the maintenance of healthy skin.

Where to get it: Brewer's yeast, fish, green and leafy vegetables (green beans, broccoli, kale, cabbage, etc.), kidneys, lean meat, liver, all milk, wheat germ, whole-grain or enriched breads, cereals and flours.

Vitamin C

What it does: It's most famous for preventing and curing scurvy, a disease that causes weakening of gums, loosening of teeth and bleeding into skin and mucous membranes. It also lessens the possibility of hemorrhage by increasing the strength of capillary walls. The vitamin aids in the body's resistance to infection and promotes sound teeth and gums.

Where to get it: Cantaloupe, citrus fruits, green and leafy vegetables, pineapple, potatoes, raw cabbage, strawberries and tomatoes.

Vitamin D

What it does: Its importance to the system is that it aids in the absorption of calcium and phosphorus, which build bones and teeth. It also prevents rickets (a bone-deforming disease) in children.

Where to get it: Egg yolks, fresh and canned oily fish, liver, cereals and milk that are Vitamin-D-enriched and evaporated milk. The vitamin is also produced by a reaction to the ultraviolet rays that penetrate your skin when you're out sunning.

Vitamin E

What it does: This vitamin is essential for the health of body tissues, but its exact function is undetermined.

Where to get it: Sources include corn oil, cotton seed oil, wheat germ, peanuts, walnuts and liver.

TERRIFIC TIME-SAVING 24-HOUR BEAUTY PLAN

If you're like so many of us who hate to bother with makeup or skin care, here's a quick basic guide designed to make the most of your looks in only a few minutes!

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

7 A.M. Healthy skin needs proper cleansing, toning and moisturizing. Total time needed: 10 minutes each morning. Step 1: A good toilet soap, worked into a lather and spread on a moistened face, is still the best way to remove grime and makeup. For dry skin, use one of the new washable cleansing creams. Step 2: Tone with an astringent containing aluminum salts (better than fresheners or clarifying lotions), an ingredient that makes the skin look firm, poreless and smooth. Step 3: Dry skins need an under-makeup moisturizer (unnecessary for normal or oily skins, which easily maintain adequate moisture) as a protective shield against cellular water evaporation. All skins can benefit from moisturizing daily in the under-eye area, where oil glands are absent.

How to Gauge Your Skin Type

Dry skin: Flakes easily, rarely breaks out, is finely textured. Oily skin: Is shiny, has enlarged pores, tends to break out. Normal skin: Has a rosy glow, no enlarged pores, may exhibit shine on nose and chin in summer or show slight signs of winter dryness.

Cleansing Applying Makeup

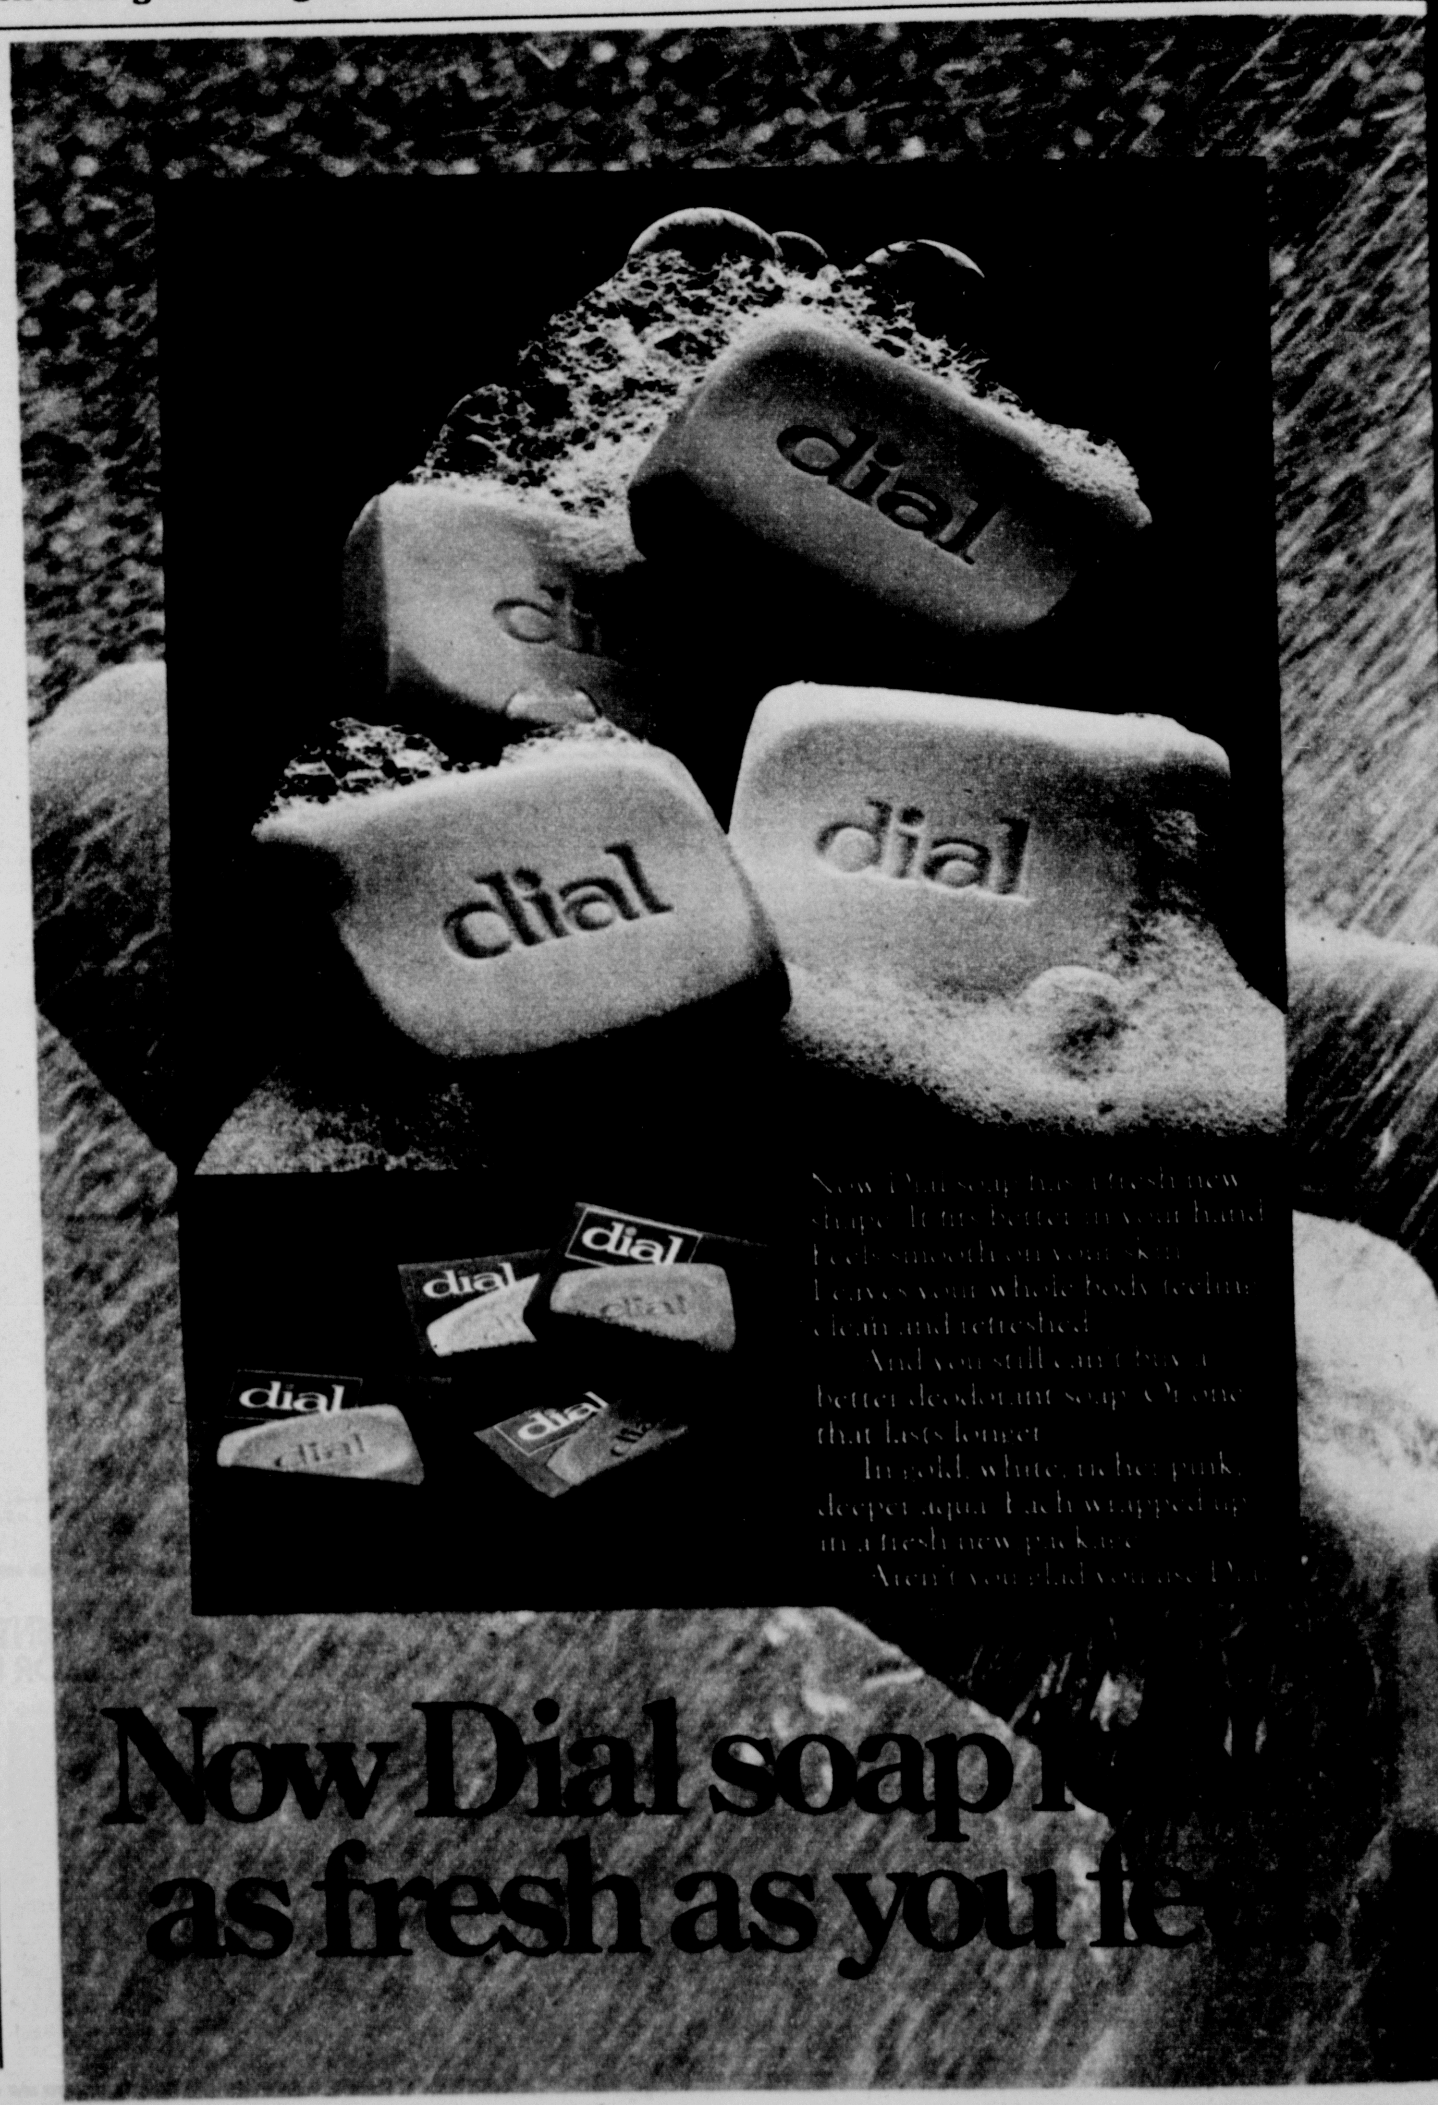
Now that you've primed the canvas, you'll need 10 minutes for makeup. Step 1: Apply foundation (when buying, to determine color closest to your skin tone, test different shades on inside of your forearm) by dotting on forehead, cheeks, nose and chin. Blend in long strokes out to hairline and under chin. Step 2: To emphasize eyes, use a subtle eyeshadow that blends with eye color. Avoid bold colors for day. Note that light shades make small eyes look larger; smoky shades flatter but subdue large eyes. Use one of the new lash-lengthening mascaras applied on top and underside of upper and lower lashes. Finish with a special soft blue liner pencil on the bottom rim of eye. It magically enhances the whites of the eyes, making them sparkle. If brows need filling in or extending (not beyond end of eye) use a gray or brown shade of pencil, never black. Steps 3 and 4: Lipstick with conditioners and rouge should be creamy for dry skins, nongreasy, such as a powder blusher, for oily skins.



NOON

Get ready for a quick fresh-up, whether you have been out for the morning or leaving the office for lunch. If makeup has faded (this usually happens with oily skins), use a prepackaged towelette to clean skin, then redo makeup. If all you need is added color, pat on rouge or blusher. Office fluorescent lights cast an unflattering pall on skin. Use a foundation with a rosy tint. Before lunch, do this isometric exercise sitting down: pull in stomach and buttocks to the count of 10 and release. Repeat for five minutes.

How to "Lengthen" Nails

Apply polish on center of the nail, leaving hairline strips bare along sides. Nails seem longer.

7 P.M.

You're planning a night out and want to look a little special. Start with a hot bath, laced with a capful or two of moisturizing oil. Next, a stimulating 10-minute mask for your skin type. Here's the time-saver: since a mask's benefits are enhanced by the heat of the bath, wear the mask while in the tub. An added relaxer: set cotton pads on your eyelids, moistened with witch hazel that's been refrigerated. Take at least 20 minutes for your beauty soak.

Now it's time for your evening makeup plan, which should take about 15 minutes. Step 1: After dark, makeup should be more intense, but not heavy. You should wear a foundation, still close to your skin tone, but in a much warmer hue. (Note that oily skins need a water-based makeup, dry skins, an oil-based formula.) A wonderful way to "set" foundation, so it lasts the whole evening, is with a fine, damp sponge daubed over entire face. Step 2: Eyes need more emphasis at night; look sensational with liner applied along upper lid close to lashes. Use a cake liner (it's easiest). Hold the brush so that your hand rests on your cheek. Then draw a thin line across your lid, extending it only a fraction at the outer corner. Eye shadow, in a richer shade, may be applied before or after liner, but if it's a cream type, do it before. A new trend to try: frosted or gold-flecked shadow. Finish eyes with mascara. (A waterproof formula will see you through a two-handkerchief movie.) Steps 3 and 4: One of the new full-bodied red lipsticks with moisturizer will lend excitement to your evening look. Or apply a bright lip gloss over your present brand. For cheeks, try a bronzed shade of rouge or blusher.

The Puffy-Lid Syndrome

If you wake up each morning sporting "golf-ball" lids, it may be that allergy or sinusitis is the cause, with fluid accumulating in the eyes. Raising the head of your bed about six inches (with wood blocks from the lumber yard) can easily correct the situation.

MIDNIGHT

A short nightly ritual of skin care, even when you've been out on the town, is essential if you want to preserve your looks. Time needed: about 10 minutes. For dry skin, simply wash as you do in the morning, preferably with the washable cleanser mentioned earlier, available at druggists or cosmetic counters. Rinse well with warm water. Instead of a towel rub, let your face air-dry. Then pat in moisturizer. For oily skin, wash vigorously with soap; rinse. Then apply astringent. (If skin is very oily, there are medicated drying lotions, which would go on last.) For normal skin, simply use a mild cleanser. Skip the astringent you use in the morning. Finish with an all-purpose lotion designed to maintain a proper oil balance.

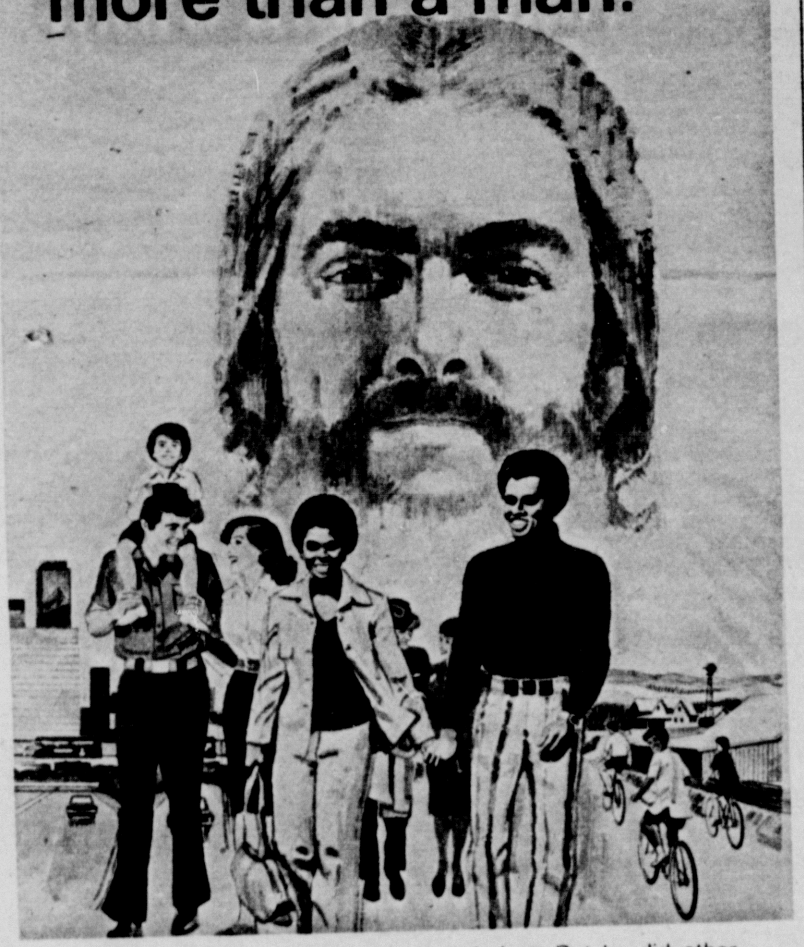
Jesus Christ, more than a man.



Like any man, Jesus Christ ate and slept. But he did other things beyond man's power. Like walking on water. Like raising the dead to life.

In view of this, it seems strange that some would say or sing, "He is only a man." Given the evidence, one ought wonder at least whether he was in fact God as he claimed.

If Christ is indeed God, wouldn't that imply that he is more than a remembered hero or teacher? Wouldn't that imply that in some way he is alive, present and active in today's world? If so, could one afford to ignore him? Or have the fuzziest notions about him? Is your present unhappiness perhaps the result of never really coming to grips with the Jesus-God question and its meaning in your life?

These are important questions. They will not go away. Somehow, they have to be answered. To help you with the answers, we would like to send you a free booklet: "Savior of All Mankind." We think you will find it helpful. Write today. No one will call.

VALENTINE SWEETS FOR YOUR SWEETHEART

Here are some delectable Valentine's dessert recipes from Food Editor Marilyn Hansen. "It was fun to think of pretty and tempting desserts especially for Valentine's Day," says she.

OLD-FASHIONED VALENTINE SUGAR COOKIES

4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup butter or margarine, softened
1½ cups sugar
1 egg
½ cup dairy sour cream
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 egg white
1 tablespoon water

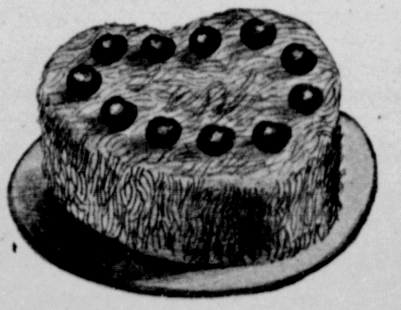
Decorative Toppings

Sugar, coarse sugar,* red sugar
Colored sprinkles
Red cinnamon candies
Silver dragées
Flaked coconut

1. Sift flour with baking powder, soda, salt and nutmeg; set aside.
2. In large bowl of electric mixer, at medium speed, beat butter, sugar and egg until light and fluffy.
3. At low speed, beat in sour cream and vanilla until smooth.
4. Gradually add to flour mixture, beating until well combined.
5. With rubber scraper, form dough into a ball. Wrap in waxed paper or foil; refrigerate several hours or overnight.
6. Divide dough into 6 equal parts. Refrigerate until ready to roll out.
7. Meanwhile, preheat oven to 375° F. Lightly grease cookie sheets.
8. On well-floured surface, roll dough, one part at a time, ¼" thick.
9. Draw a large heart pattern on cardboard 7½" x 8½". Place pattern on rolled-out dough and cut around pattern with sharp knife. Slide cookie sheet under cookie.
10. Beat egg white with 1 tablespoon water. Brush cookies with egg-white mixture.
11. Using cinnamon candies or silver dragées, make mottoes on hearts: "Be Mine," "I Love You," "Yours Forever," "Eat Your Heart Out" and so on. Sprinkle lightly with sugar; edge with sprinkle of coarse sugar, red sugar, colored sprinkles or coconut. Be imaginative!
12. Bake about 12 to 14 minutes or until cookie is golden. Let cool one minute on cookie sheet, then carefully slide off cookie sheet onto rack to cool completely.

Makes 6 large cookie hearts

*Crush sugar cubes with rolling pin or in blender.

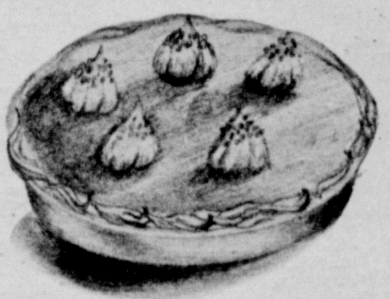


MARILYN'S COCONUT VALENTINE CAKE

1 pkg. (18½ ozs.) white or yellow cake mix
1 can (1 lb.) cherry pie filling
1 pkg. (7.2 ozs.) fluffy white frosting mix
1 pkg. (7 ozs.) flaked coconut

1. Preheat oven to 350° F. Grease and flour 2 heart-layer cake pans. Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Divide batter between prepared pans.
2. Bake layers 30 to 40 minutes or until a wooden pick poked in center comes out clean.
3. Cool in pans 10 minutes. Invert, remove pans and completely cool layers on wire rack.
4. Place bottom cake layer on serving plate. Spread with 1½ cups pie filling. Top with second cake layer.
5. Prepare fluffy white frosting mix and frost sides and top of cake. Coat cake completely with coconut.

Makes 8 to 10 servings



STRAWBERRY PARFAIT ANGEL PIE

2 egg whites, room temperature
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ cup sugar
1 pkg (3 ozs.) strawberry gelatin
1¼ cups boiling water
1 pt. vanilla ice cream
1 cup prepared whipped topping or whipped cream

1. Make meringue shell: Preheat oven to 200° F. Line a 9-inch pie pan with foil; lightly grease and coat with flour.
2. In small bowl of electric mixer, at high speed, beat egg whites with cream of tartar until soft peaks form.
3. Gradually add sugar, beating continuously. Beat for 5 minutes, at high speed, until meringue is very stiff.
4. With large spoon spread meringue mixture evenly in foil-lined pie pan. Swirl edges lightly.
5. Bake for 3 hours. (Purpose is actually to dry out the meringue, not to color it.) Turn off oven after 3 hours and leave in overnight.
6. Make parfait filling: Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add ice cream by spoonfuls, stirring until melted and smooth.
7. Remove foil from meringue shell; replace in pie pan. Pour parfait filling into shell. Chill until firm, at least 1½ hours.
8. Garnish with rosettes or spoonfuls of whipped topping.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

2. Add ¾ cup cold water and chill until slightly thickened. Pour into a heart-shaped or other 6-cup mold.
3. Arrange sliced bananas in decorative pattern around edge of mold. Chill until set, but not firm.
4. Meanwhile, dissolve remaining gelatin in remaining boiling water. Add ice cream and stir until smooth and well blended. Pour into mold over clear gelatin. Chill until firm, at least 4 hours; unmold.

Makes 6 cups or 12 servings

RED RASPBERRY OR STRAWBERRY MOUSSE

2 pkgs (10-oz. size) frozen raspberries or strawberries, thawed
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup plus 1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Dash salt
4 egg whites, room temperature
2 cups heavy cream
1½ cups crushed almond or coconut macaroons
2 tablespoons almond, raspberry or peach liqueur

1. In electric blender blend raspberries or strawberries until smooth; strain into medium saucepan; discard seeds.
2. Sprinkle gelatin over puréed fruit; cook over low heat, stirring until dissolved.
3. Add ¼ cup sugar, lemon juice and salt. Stir until sugar dissolves; remove from heat.
4. Refrigerate about 20 to 30 minutes or until mixture mounds when dropped from a spoon.
5. In large bowl, with mixer at high speed, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Beating at high speed, gradually sprinkle in ¼ cup sugar; beat until whites stand in stiff peaks.
6. Gently fold fruit mixture into beaten whites.
7. In small bowl, beat 1½ cups cream until soft peaks form. With rubber spatula, gently fold into fruit mixture.
8. Sprinkle 1¼ cups macaroon crumbs with 2 tablespoons liqueur.
9. Pour half of mousse mixture into 2-qt. serving bowl. Sprinkle with soaked crumbs. Top with remaining mousse mixture; swirl surface prettily. Refrigerate until set—at least 4 hours.
10. At serving time, whip remaining cream in small bowl until soft peaks form; sweeten with 1 tablespoon sugar. Garnish surface of mousse with swirls of whipped cream; finish with a dusting of crumbs.

8 hulled strawberries or thin orange slices

1. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add ice cubes and stir until gelatin is thickened.
2. Remove any unmelted ice and stir in champagne.* Pour into individual glasses or dishes. Large-bowled wine glasses or parfait glasses make attractive containers.
3. Chill until set, about 2 hours. Garnish with strawberries or orange slices.

Makes 4 cups or 8 servings

*Gelatin must be thickened when champagne is added to hold bubbles in suspension.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Do your eyes give away your preferences?

POLITICS AND YOU

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The kind of music a person prefers tells you how he's likely to vote.
2. People judge a political figure they like in a completely different manner from one they dislike.
3. Your eyes give away your political preferences.
4. The best way for a political speaker to deal with a persistent heckler is to squelch him with the most devastating remark he can think of.
5. Most people can be influenced in favor of virtually any candidate by the simple process of telling them over and over again—via billboards, newspapers and TV ads—to "VOTE FOR SO-AND-SO."
6. Regardless of whether he wins or loses, any candidate is viewed more favorably after election.

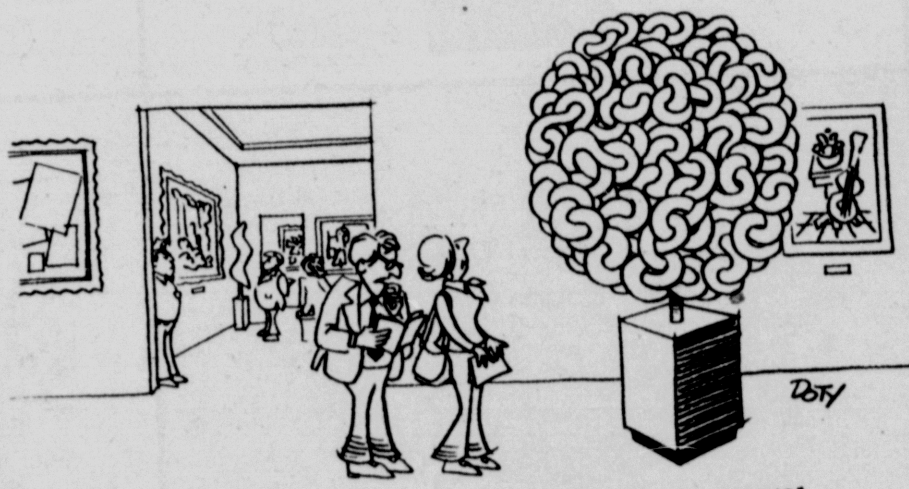
ANSWERS

1. True. In the case of men and women in the college-age brackets, at least, investigators from the University of Iowa and Ball State University found that "Conservatives show a greater preference than do liberals for current hits and easy-listening music, while liberals tend to like folk music, the blues and protest music substantially more." The study further showed that, contrary to popular belief, rock music —so frequently associated with leftish leanings—is actually "very appealing to students of all political persuasions and is only slightly more popular among liberals than conservatives."
2. True. University studies show that people tend to go all out in an attempt to "psych out" a political candidate they're not initially drawn to, subjecting each facet of his personality to severe scrutiny and taking an extremely hard look at his actions and motivations. A liked candidate, however, is judged by a much more lenient yardstick.
3. True. Psychological studies have demonstrated that your eyes reveal hidden thoughts, emotions and attitudes. Tests have shown, for example, that when asked a question requiring some reflection, such as "Do you think most people are happy?" some people's eyes consistently turn to the left, while others turn to the right. And University of California investigators have found that the right- and left-eye movers not only have different personality characteristics but that they even vote differently, the left-eye movers scoring significantly higher on tests designed to show liberal leanings. University of Chicago studies have shown that when subjects see pictures of the leading political candidates, the pupils of their eyes instantly reveal their preferences by growing larger when viewing a picture of a favored candidate, smaller when shown a photo of one they dislike.
4. False. A study conducted by a team of University of Missouri behavior specialists tested the effectiveness of various reactions to a hostile heckler's attack. It was found that the speaker "was seen in the most favorable light by the audience when he refuted the various criticisms made by the verbal assailant in a calm, friendly and courteous tone of voice and tried to establish good relations with his assailant."
5. False. Stanford University studies show that, while in lower-level elections voting behavior is easily influenced by a high repetition of innocuous advertising, "this phenomenon does not occur in the higher-level races." To put it a different way, the more important the election the more a voter tends to be influenced by his own thinking and reasoning.
6. True. Georgia State University studies of a national election indicated that candidates are regarded more favorably after an election whether they are winners or losers. Another interesting finding: men and women were inclined to differ "in the kind of winner they prefer, with males becoming more favorable to a candidate who has won by a narrow margin and females becoming more favorable toward a candidate who has won by a large margin."

Observations™

Gum for oil wells. A thickener called xanthan gum is being used with detergents to help free oil that clings to underground rock formations and resists recovery by conventional methods. Once injected into a well, the thickener restricts the detergent to where it will do the most good, keeping it from running all over the place. This and other methods of enhanced recovery may eventually add billions of barrels to America's oil reserves (about two-thirds of the oil ever discovered in this country is still underground, because it's hard to get out). The ultimate problem is economic, not technological. Some experimental recovery methods double the price of a barrel of oil, and others are even more costly.

More regulatory silliness. When a welfare client in Illinois dies, the Illinois Welfare Department routinely addresses a note to the deceased, telling him: "Your assistance benefits will be discontinued. Reason: It has been reported to our office that you expired." Well, you can't take it with you.



IT'S EITHER "GORDIAN KNOT" OR "GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS"

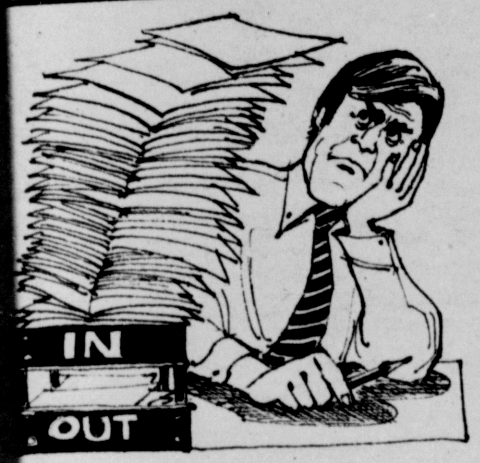
HOW TO GET THINGS DONE

Are you a procrastinator? Here's a simple, efficient method to change you into a do-it-now person.



By Edwin C. Bliss

If procrastination is your problem, don't put off doing something about it! The most fundamental approach to the problem recognizes that when we fail to act as promptly as we should it usually is not because the particular task in question is extremely difficult, but rather because we have formed a habit of procrastinating whenever possible. Procrastination is seldom related to just a single item; it usually is an ingrained behavior pattern. If we can change our habits of thinking, we can break the pattern.

The importance of this fact cannot be overemphasized. I am convinced that the most significant difference between effective and ineffective people is that the ineffective person thinks, "This task must be done, but it is unpleasant; therefore I will put it off as long as I can," whereas the effective person thinks, "This task is unpleasant, but it must be done; therefore I'll do it now so I can forget about it."

But the prospect of changing a deeply rooted habit dismays many people. They've tried it many times through sheer will power—the New Year's resolution approach—and have failed. It isn't all that difficult, though, provided you use the right system.

William James, the father of American psychology, discussed such a system in his famous essay on habit, which was published in Popular Science magazine in 1887, and it subsequently has been validated by the studies of behavioral scientists. As applied to changing the procrastination habit, it would work as follows:

1. Decide to start making the change immediately, as soon as you finish reading this article, while you are motivated. Taking that first step promptly is important.

2. Don't try to do too much too quickly. Instead of trying to revolutionize your entire approach, just force yourself right now to do one thing you have been putting off. Then, beginning tomorrow morning, start each day by doing the most unpleasant thing on your "To Do" list.

Notice that I did not say the most important thing on your list. The most important things should be allocated specific blocks of time. The most unpleasant thing very often will be a small matter: an overdue apology you've been meaning to make; a confrontation with a fellow worker that you've been putting off; an annoying chore you know you should tackle. Whatever it is, do it before you open the mail, before you return that phone call, before you begin your usual morning routine.

This simple procedure can well set the tone for your entire day. You will get a feeling of exhilaration from knowing that although the day is only fifteen minutes old, you have already accomplished the most unpleasant thing you have to do all day. After you have done this a few days you will become locked into the habit for life, because it is what the behaviorists call a self-reinforcing action—one that has an inherent reward that reinforces the behavior. (This is the way an infant learns to stand; the feeling of achievement the baby gets from standing reinforces the actions that were necessary to accomplish the feat the first time, and the procedure soon becomes second nature. Similarly, the "do-it-now" habit can become second nature.)

Although I have recommended that you force yourself to follow this procedure only once a day, you will find that soon it will influence decisions throughout the day. Every time you are given an unpleasant chore you will itch to get at it, so that you can get that euphoric feeling that comes from promptly disposing of a nasty task.

The beautiful thing about this system is that you don't have to do anything you weren't going to do anyway; you intended to do that chore or you wouldn't have put it on your list. It simply means making it number one on the list, instead of number five or ten.

3. There is one caution: during the period when your new habit is taking root, especially during the first couple of weeks, you must be especially careful not to permit any exceptions. William James compared it to rolling up a ball of string: a single slip can undo more than many turns can wind up. So be tough with yourself, just for the first few minutes of the day, each day for the next two weeks, and I can promise you a new habit of priceless value.

So set this aside and start. Now.

SEATING ARRANGEMENT

Equal Rights have progressed quite far,
But still I wonder just when
At the dinner table, at parties and such,
Ladies will start seating men.

I've pulled back a chair for many a year
As quickly as I was able,
Then pushed it in, with a lady on it,
Till just close enough to the table.

Well, now it's my turn to be seated, I say,
In fact it's a little bit late.
Each could seat oneself or, just to be fair,
I suggest that we alternate.

Short People Shortchanged On Jobs?

Robert Half, president of the largest employment agency in the country for financial officers and accountants, says that shorter persons get hired less often and for less money. Half quotes a study by Saul Feldman, a sociologist at Case Western Reserve, who invented the term "heightism" (like racism or sexism) after studying a graduating class at the University of Pittsburgh. Feldman—he's 5′ 4″—found that:

- Men 6′ 2″ or taller received starting salaries 12.4 percent higher than equally qualified men of 6′ or less.
- Tall men entering the education profession averaged 10 percent higher salaries than shorter men.
- Women 5′ 3″ or less earn measurably less than those taller.

Whatever Happened To Sing Sing?

The 30-foot walls, bare and ominous, still loom over the shores of the Hudson. The guards still man the towers that dot the walls, their weapons loaded and at the ready. But the Sing Sing of "Mad-Dog" Esposito, "Bad-Boy" Grant and "Death-House" Mike is no more.

In its place stands the Ossining Correctional Facility—a way station for convicts who are moving on, either up for long stretches at other prisons or model prisoners soon to be released. And like its inmates, the prison itself is in a state of transition.

The "Death House," in which more than 600 executions took place since it was built in 1922, is being converted into a storage area. The cells where the condemned spent their last days have crumbled with decay. The room where the electric chair once was is marked only by holes in the floor where bolts held the chair in place. The last execution in Sing Sing was in 1961.

While inmates, prison officials and guards have come and gone, the residents of the village of Ossining, N.Y., who grew up in the shadow of the prison remember what Sing Sing used to be. Some say they miss it. "I was in the Army in the '40's," remembers one resident, "and a guy would always ask, 'Where you from?' I'd say Ossining, and he'd look at me like which side of Oshkosh is that, and I'd say, 'You know—Sing Sing?' and his eyes would light up. 'Sure,' he'd say."

Quick Facial Changes May Give A Liar Away

A furrowed forehead . . . arching eyebrows . . . the blink of an eye . . . a frown . . . all of these could be signs you are telling a lie. At least that's the theory of Ohio State University professor Roger Bennett, who says subconscious facial expressions, ordinarily occurring in a fraction of a second, are what give liars away. He has developed a training film for his classes to help his students learn how to spot the fibbers. The method has been used in psychology and by students of nonverbal communication, and Bennett is hoping the technique can be applied to help law-enforcement officers and reporters. The students have correctly identified the liars 80 percent of the time.

Reassuring Words For Stepfathers

Stepchildren apparently are as contented and happy as other kids. But although stepchildren are equally successful in school and socially, researchers say stepfathers, almost without exception, imagine themselves failures as parents. The stepfathers "simply don't believe they're doing that good a job, and they are perpetuating a negative image of themselves," said Dr. Paul J. Bohannan of the University of California at Santa Barbara, who headed the research team of the study made for the National Institute of Mental Health. Sociologist Rosemary Erickson, who helped in the research, said mothers agreed with their children that stepfathers are doing a good job. "It looks like the most significant finding is that it's more important to have a father, whether it's a stepfather or a natural father, than to be raised in a mother-headed household," she said.

New Rabies Vaccine Found

Researchers have developed an effective and simplified new treatment for rabies, says Dr. Hilary Koprowski, a Philadelphia physician who reports his findings in the Journal of the American Medical Association. The treatment involves only six shots of a new vaccine that has virtually no side effects. The vaccine should be available within a year.

Quick Takes

What food product has most increased in popularity in the last 10 years? Yogurt? Artificial sweetner? No—it's pepper. Americans are using nearly 200 times more pepper a year than we did as recently as 1967 . . . Several women's groups across the country are presently petitioning the Federal Communications Commission in hopes it will give women equal status with men in the nation's telephone directories. They've asked the Commission to end the extra charge for dual listings, which they contend is a massive case of sex discrimination . . . Grateful students at the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse have founded a scholarship in honor of one of the most important (and most popular) men on campus—the local bartender. The namesake of the Ray George Scholarship Fund opened his bar in 1944 and has kept the beer, student loans and paternal advice flowing ever since . . . Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has become the first honorary member of the Harlem Globetrotters. In responding to Stan Greeson, Globetrotters president, Kissinger said, "It is an honor to be associated with a group whose won-and-lost record is certainly better than my own. My only worry is how I will look in short pants."

Ghost Town For Sale

Want to buy a ghost town? Frederica Heisler, who owns most of Rhyolite, Nev., says she'll sell her 400 acres and restored rail depot for $250,000. Rhyolite was a boom town in the early 1900's, but after only a few years its gold played out, the financial market tumbled and the town dried up. Since then, the buildings have crumbled, save the depot and the world-famous Bottle House, a mecca for collectors of old bottles. Eight people live in the town, which is 140 miles northwest of Las Vegas. Mrs. Heisler says she is anxious to return to her native Cleveland.

MERIT & MERIT MENTHOL. KINGS & 100's.

We taste-tested MERIT 100's against some of the toughest competition we could find: higher tar 100mm cigarettes.

Here are the results.

Test Data Conclusive

New 12 mg. tar MERIT 100's were taste-tested against a number of major 100mm brands ranging from 17 mg. to 19 mg. tar.

Thousands of smokers were tested.* The results: overall, they liked the taste of MERIT 100's as much as the higher tar 100mm brands tested.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL. King Size and new 100's.

The taste barrier for low tar smoking has been broken again.

Kings: 9 mg. "tar," 0.7 mg. nicotine—
100's: 12 mg. "tar," 0.9 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

YOUNG MAGICIANS

Parents' Magazine introduces a new program of fun-filled, constructive and challenging play for children

Why a magic club for youngsters?

Simple. Children are just naturally interested in magic. It piques their curiosity. Starts them thinking. And it's fun.

Magic can actually help develop your child's personality. Give him poise and confidence. Teach him how to speak before an audience.

Imagine the delight when your child...

...takes a card, rips it up, then puts it in the Phantom Folder. A few magic words and presto! the card's back together again.

...places a handkerchief over his hand... says the right "magic words"...to make coins appear out of thin air.

...puts a glass over a coin. Covers both with a newspaper. Then makes the coin vanish...then the glass!

Guaranteed to Work

Our tricks are guaranteed to work the first time. And every time. Without any special training or difficult "sleight of hand."
